

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

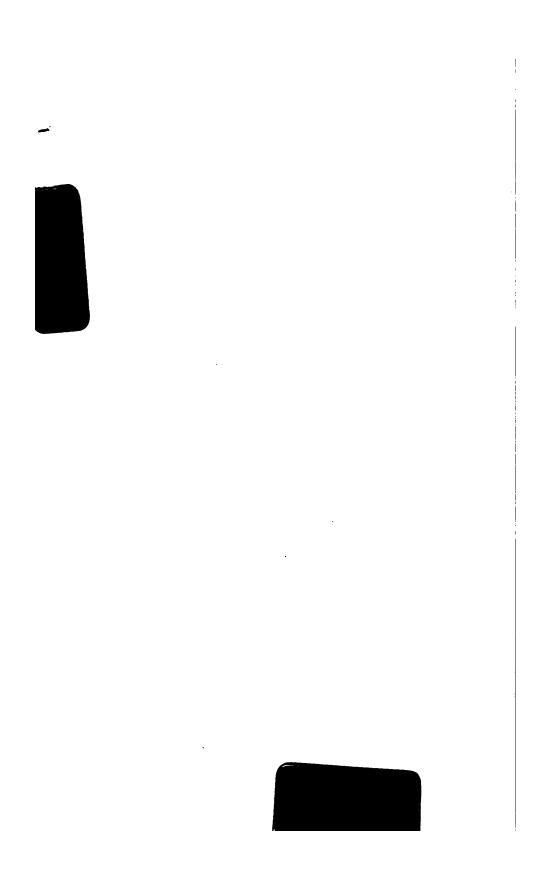

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

leçorresponden, la Gramática Inglesa, recopilada de los mejores autores, y The English Reader.

El primer vocabulario comprehende los nombres de aquellos objetos que occurren frequentemente en la conversacion: se ha señalado el que ero en la parte Española solamente; porque la lengua Inglesa no como géneros en las cosas inanimadas; circunstancia que hace muy tere en lquisicion: y á cada voz se ha adaptado una frase familiar de a pella que comunmente se usan con la misma voz. De este modo la frase familiar hace mas patente la voz fundamental en cada vocabulario; de la misma suerte que un quadro excelente da mas realce á la pintura que contiene. Algunos verbos que siguen ciertos nombres, con sus correspondientes frases, están destinados para describir las acciones, que estos mismos nombres presentan necesariamente al entendimiento al tiempo de pronunciarse, y por esta causa su adicion es muy importante al vocabulario.

En la distribucion de este no se han clasificado los términos de un modo arbitrario; ántes bien se ha procurado seguir, en quanto ha sido posible, el órden en que nos los presentan nuestras necesidades en la sociedad.

El segundo vocabulario contiene las varias especies de Números, los principales Adjetivos, y una coleccion de Nombres Abstractos — Los números se han colocado los primeros en este vocabulario; porque, como las ideas relativas á la numeracion ocurren con tanta frequencia al entendimiento humano, sus signos deberán aprenderse lo mas temprano que fuere posible. Con respecto á los adjetivos Ingleses, el estudiante observará inmediatamente, que, así como los nombres, carecen de género y número, y son ciertamente indeclinables.

El tercer vocabulario es una serie de las voces mas importantes; à saber, aquellas que forman el culace y complemento del sentido entre las partes de la oracion, y se conocen en la gramática por la denominacion de Artículos, Pronombres, Prefissiciones, Alverbios. Conjunciones, è Interjecciones. Estos términos son tan esenciales para la expresion de nuestras ideas, que apénas podemos usar sentencia alguna sin introducir alguno de ellos.

Para quedar mas completamente convencidos de su frequente usos extráyganse, con los auxiliares haber y ser, de qualquiera página impresa, ó manuscrita, y no quedarán mas que unas dos quintas partes de ella. Esta circunstancia demostrará con mas claridad que ningun otro argumento, lo conveniente que es proveer la memoria de un suficiente caudal de estas importantes voces.

Síguense despues las colecciones de frases, idiotismos, y refrancs Españoles mas comunes. Para conseguir la mayor perfeccion en esta parte tan interesante, se ha consultado un gran número de los libros mas selectos; y muchas de las frases que todavía faltaban para completar la coleccion, se han suplido de la memoria.

Llegamos á la Gramática Inglesa, que proporcionará al estudiante Español adquirir un conocimiento perfecto de la sintáxis de la lengua Inglesa. Esta obra está recopilada de las mejores que se han publicado para uso de los Españoles que aprenden el Ingles; habiéndonos aprovechado, ademas, de las sabias observaciones de Sinet, Cobbett, y otros excelentes Gramáticos, á las quales hemos añadido las que nuestro conocimiento de la lengua Inglesa, y experiencia adquirida en el exercicio de enseñar, nos han sugerido.

Este tomo concluye con the English Reader, que es una coleccion de piezas particularmente calculada para dar la última mano en la adquisicion de la lengua Inglesa.

Pasamos á tratar del segundo tomo* de esta obra, el qual está dividido en quatro partes.

La primera contiene el analísis de las varias especies de palabras de que se compone el lenguage. Esta materia está tratada baxo la forma de una conversacion familiar, lo que la hace mas interesante é inteligible, y releva al estudiante de una incesante serie de largos y prolixos razonamientos. En esta parte se instruye al discípulo de muchos puntos esenciales y peculiares de la lengua Española, y se le prepara para la Sintáxis.

Esperamos que la conjugacion de los verbos se hallará bastante exemplificada. No nos atreverémos á difundirnos aqui sobre el sistema de los célebres Beauzée y Sicard respecto de los tensos de los verbos: nosotros le hemos adoptado, y creemos que el tra-tado del verbo demostrará completamente su verdad y sencillez; pero lo que le recomendará aun mas que quantos argumentos pueden hacerse en su favor, es la facilidad de retenerle, y su cómoda aplica ion no solo á la lengua materna sino tambien á qualquiera otra que el discípulo quiera aprender. Sin embargo, condescendiendo em lo deseos de muchos maestros de nota, hemos puesto los nombres de la antigua nomenclatura al lado de los de la nueva.

^{*} Este tomo aunque, á primera vista, parece enteramente destinado para uso de solo aquellas personas que aprenden la lengua Española por medio de la Inglesa, será de mucha utilidad á los Españoles que, habiendo hecho algunos progresos en el Ingles, deseen conseguir un perfecto conocimiento de él. La explicación que darémos del modo de usar esta obra, les hará conocer el mucho provecho de que les puede servir este tomo.

La regunda parte es del todo gramatical y crítica, y contiene el sistema de Sintáxis Española mas extenso que jamas se ha publicado.

La tercera parte dará al estudiante un perfecto conocimiento del Estilo y Correspondencia Mercantil, de las formas mas aprobadas de letras de cambio, libranzas, pagarées, conocimientos, facturas, &c. tanto en Español como en Ingles, para que pueda ser útil á los comerciantes Españoles, Americanos, é Ingleses.

Esta obra es enteramente nueva en Español, y tiene la recomendacion de abrazar todas las circunstancias de consequencia é importancia que pueden ofrecerse á un comerciante en el curso de sus negocios.

La quarta y última parte se compone de piezas y extractos elegantes en prosa y verso, sacados de los mas célebres Autores y Traductores Españoles, y puede asegurarse que forma una preciosa guirnalda compuesta de las mas hermosas y fragantes flores.

Habiendo hecho una relacion circunstanciada de los objetos que abraza esta obra, pasamos á exponer el método de usarla, para lo qual suplicamos á los que descen imponerse en él, se sirvan leer la página 1. del tomo 1. y observar, despues, el siguiente exemplo:

El maestro Ingles ó qualquiera otra persona que pronuncie bienel Ingles, leerá despacio al principiante la primera frase sílaba por sílaba,

Buy me a three-pound loaf.

El discípulo deberá repetirla sitábicamente despues de su preceptor, hasta que su pronunciacion sea correcta.

El mismo método se seguirá en las otras frases de dicha página.

El maestro pasará á las páginas 138, 213, 269, donde se pronunciarán sucesivamente algunas otras frases del modo referido en la pag. 1.

y eer, y algunos otros que sirven de modelos de conjugacion, y haya adquirido un conocimiento perfecto de los verbos irregulares, cuya lista se halla en la página 451 de la Gramática Inglesa juntamente con los puntos mas esenciales explicados en esta obra, que se debua aprender al mismo tiempo que las frases, se hallará precisamente en estado de entender el Ingles quando se le hablen, y será capaz de expresar sus ideas en esta lengua, &c.

Entônces será conveniente pasar al estudiante á la coleccion de pie zas contenidas en the English Reader, que fácilmente entenderá por las muchas voces y frases que ya tiene aprendidas de memoria.† Despues de algunas semanas empleadas en este exercicio, le aconsejamos que lea con la mayor atencion (lo que él podrá entónces executar con aprovechamiento y gusto, á causa de sus progresos en la lengua Inglesa) la parte del segundo tomo, intitulada " Syntax made Easy," cuyas reglas observará cuidadosamente; pues comparando entre sí los exemplos Ingleses y Españoles, que las declaran, descubrirá las diferencias de ámbas lenguas; lo que necesariamente le dará un perfecto conocimiento de las particularidades de la Inglesa. Este modo comparativo de aprender la sintáxis, acompañado de la lectura de los autores clásicos, nos parece el mas filosófico y, al mismo tiempo, el mas eficaz. Debemos aquí advertir, que muchas de las reglas contenidas en esta parte de nuestra obra las hemos tomado de Mr. Dufief en su Nature Displayed, aplicada à la lengua Francesa; porque la sintáxis de esta y la de la Española convienen en muchos puntos. Nosotros confesamos esto, con tanto mas gusto, quanto estamos ciertos de que las mas de ellas son originales, y están explicadas con la mayor perspicuidad; por lo qual esperamos que darán un mérito particular á puestra obra.

^{*}El que desée adquirir mas hábito en la conjugacion Inglesa, deberá leer con frequencia los verbos del segundo tomo, donde están conjugados con mas extension que en la Gramática Inglesa.

[†] No hay necesidad de empezar á leer los autores muy á los principios; porque aprendiendo los vocabularios &c., del modo que hemos propuesto, aprendemos las três cosas que constituyen el conocimiento de una lengua; á saber, el entenderla, hablarla, y leerla ó escribirla.

El aplicar al principiante á la lectura de libros proporcionados á su gusto, dividirá su atencion (que deberá dedicarse enteramente á aprender de memoria la parte práctica), y el trabajo de aprender las frases, especialmente á los principios, le hará disgustarse de ellas.

Los que, habiendo pasado el curso de Lengua Inglesa que hemos pesentado, y que consideramos suficiente para quanto puede ofrecerse carla vida social, deseen exceder y competir en el conocimiento del logles aun con los naturales mas intruidos, deberán estudiar las gracias del esulo y los mejores modelos de composicion. A estos les aconsegnos lean las mejores comedias Inglesas, así en prosa como en verso; las novelas que se consideran como modelos en su clase; á Addison, Johnson, Robertson, Hume, Gibbon, Burke; los varios autores Británicos de Ensayos; las ediciones de poetas Ingleses publicadas por Bell ó Anderson, &c.; y con el estudio de estas obras adquirirán dentro de muy poco tiempo la pureza del estilo, libre enteramente de hispanismos.

Quando se haya conseguido esta perseccion, podrá el estudiante traducir, en Ingles, algunas de las piezas mas interesantes del Lector Español. Y con esto tenemos la satisfaccion de haber demostrado, que, aun aquella parte del tomo segundo que parece destinada á los Ingleses ó Americanos solamente, es tambien muy esencial á los Españoles, que desean adquirir un conocimiento persecto de la Lengua Inglesa.

Para concluir mejor esta introduccion, permitasenos valernos de las mismas palabras del sabio inventor del método de la Naturaleza.—
"Habiendo, segun creo, satisfecho completamente al Lector acerca de este modo de instruccion, y no pudiendo resistir por mas tiempo la poderosa voz de la razon y de la experiencia, me atrevo á decir, que este es el mas sencillo, expedito, filosófico, é infalible método que puede usarse; y para evitar que se me acuse de preocupacion á su favor, confieso ingenuamente que este método no es mio, sino de la NATURALEZA, acomodado á la capacidad de todas las personas que pueden hablar y leer surlengua materna. Yo no tengo mas mérito que el de haberle descubierto, cosa que otros pudieran haber hecho, y el de haberle aplicado á la enseñanza de una lengua en particular; mostrando al mismo tiempo que es aplicable á todas en general."

El aprender el Ingles dentro del mas corto tiempo que puede imaginarse, no es la única ventaja que se saca del método de la naturaleza. Este facilita tambien la adquisicion de qualquiera otra lengua, estableciendo un modo universal, y renueva frequentemente la memoria, exercitando, de un modo muy sencillo y sutil, esta noble potencia del alma al mismo tiempo que el entendimiento se cultiva y fortalece con un método fundado en la analogía y analísis, nuestras mas infalibles y seguras guias en el arte de pensar. La experiencia ha probado completamente que los que han aprendido el Ingles por el nuevo método, han conseguido mucha facilidad para sus otros estudios.

INTRODUCTION.

Take Nature's path, and mad Opinion's leave.

Pope.

THIS work is (as its title shows) an application to the Spanish and English languages, of the method of Nature in teaching language to man. This admirable process was discovered by Mr. N. G. Dufief, of the city of Philadelphia, and adapted by him to the French. The first edition appeared in the latter end of 1804. The fate of the work was singular in this particular, that it succeeded almost at once, notwithstanding the novelty of the doctrines it inculcates, and their complete contrast or opposition to those that had, for so many centuries, been in possession of directing the mind in the study of language, and notwithstanding the general combination of professors and teachers, who (with a few solitary exceptions) strenuously opposed its introduction into the schools*. It was to public opinion, that determined

^{*}It was not because the greatest number of those gentlemen doubted the soundness of the new doctrine that they were so averse to it. It was owing chiefly to the fear that the rapidity of the progress of the pupil would in a short time give a mortal blow to their existence as professional men, by thinning their schools, or that the facility afforded to the pupil of learning speedily a language by himself, without wanting the master but for a few lessons of pronunciation (as Mr. Dufief's Universal and Pronouncing Dictionary, which enables any Englishman or American to learn the true pronunciation of every French word, and vice versa every Frenchman to learn the English pronunciation, was not then published).

Experience soon proved that those fears were ill-grounded, as the very reverse happened, that is, the number of persons wishing to learn French greatly increased, while teachers who had adopted Nature's process thought themselves intitled to an additional salary, which the gratitude and liberality of the pupil readily granted. These circumstances could not fail to induce the great early in favour of a method grounded in self-evident principles, that so complete a triumph is to be ascribed.

We refer the curious, and learners who may have availed ther selves of this work, in order to speedily learn the Spanish language, to read with due attention the Preliminary Discourse of the second edition, and the Introduction to the third edition* of Mr. Dufief's "Nature Displayed;" they will see by what simple means, nature produces great effects, and become sensible to what degree the powerful influence of methods, which are the pinions of the mind, may be carried.

Without further preamble, we therefore proceed to the analysis of the work, and to explain the manner of using it, which we submit to our readers, especially to such as are willing to abide by the standard of experience, or, in other words, to give it a fair trial before they condemn it.

The work is comprised in two volumes: the first, which is practical, is by far the more important to the learner, since it enables him to acquire a competent knowledge of the phraseology of the Spanish language.

It contains three vocabularies, collections of conversation and idiomatical phrases, a selection of the most popular Spanish proverbs, which we have endeavoured to render into English by corresponding ones, a Gramática Inglesa, compiled from the best authorities, and an English Reader.

mass of instructors to adopt a method, which instead of being hostile to their interests was friendly to them. The only men who remained servilely attached to the old routine were such as had written paltry grammars, made out of the shreds of other grammars, as is customary, and of course felt a paternal love for their bantling, or such as gave way to that indolence of mind, which prevents the investigation of things, even with people who are interested in them, owing to the labour of attention it requires; a cirumstance which completely disqualifies them from availing themselves of any improvements even on the very science they profess to teach.

*We have followed this edition owing to its numerous advantages over the two first, and only introduced such changes as the difference of genius between the Spanish and English languages imposed upon us, without the least deviation, however, from the original method: a circumstance that proves that it is unquestionably applicable to all languages.

The first vocabulary is that of the names of objects which most frequently occur in conversation: the gender has been carefully affixed to each of them. To every word is adapted a familiar phrase, such is often used with the word. This familiar phrase renders the fundamental words in each vocabulary more striking: in the same manner as an elegant frame renders the picture it contains more conspicuous. Some verbs, with appropriate phrases, following particular nouns, are designed to describe the actions which those very nouns might naturally bring to the mind on being pronounced, and, on that account, they become a valuable addition to the vocabulary.

In the distribution of this vocabulary, the terms have not been classed in an arbitrary manner; but, on the contrary, the order pointed out by that of our wants in society has been followed as near as possible. The adjectives have been so disposed as to enable the scholar easily and promptly to acquire as perfect a knowledge of the gender of the Spanish adjectives as a Spaniard himself can possess.

The second vocabulary comprises the various kinds of numbers, the principal adjectives, and a sufficient collection of abstract nouns. The numbers are placed at the head of this vocabulary; because, as the ideas relative to numeration so frequently occur to the human understanding, their signs should be known as early as possible.

The third vocabulary is a series of very important words, which are the words forming the link or completion of sense between the other parts of speech, and are known in grammar by the denomination of Articles, Pronouns, Prepositions, Adverbs, Conjunctions, and Interjections. These terms are so essential to the conveyance of our ideas, that we can scarcely utter a single sentence without introducing some of them.

To be more fully convinced of their frequent occurrence, extract them, with the auxiliary verbs to have and to be, from any printed or written page, and little more than two fifths of it will remain behind.

This circumstance will more clearly demonstrate the expedience of furnishing the memory with a supply of those essential words, than all the arguments that can be made use of to point it out.

The collections of Conversation, Idiomatical Phrases, and of the most popular Spanish Proverbs follow next. In order to obtain this interesting part, numerous and appropriate books were laid under contribution. Many of the phrases wanting to complete the collection were supplied from memory.

We are now come to the "Gramática Inglesa," which will enable the English student to acquire a thorough knowledge of the syntax of the English language. This work was compiled from the best works for the use of Spaniards wishing to learn English, while Siret, Cobbett, and other eminent grammarians supplied us with valuable remarks, to which we added such as our experience in teaching, and knowledge of the English language suggested.

This volume concludes with the English Reader, a collection of pieces particularly calculated to give the last polish to the acquirement of the English language. In speaking of the manner of using this work, we will show that these two parts, which seem exclusively destined to the English student, will be eminently serviceable to the Spanish student.

It remains to speak of the second volume of this work, which is divided into four parts.

The first part contains an analysis of the various kinds of words of which language is composed. The subject is introduced in the familiar form of conversation, which renders it more lively and intelligible, and relieves the scholar from an incessant series of long and prolix reasoning. In this part the pupil is informed on many points, essential and peculiar to the Spanish language, and gets thus prepared for the Spanish syntax.

The conjugation of verbs will, we trust, be found sufficiently exemplified. We shall not here attempt to expatiate on the system of the celebrated Beauzée and Sicard, concerning the tenses of verbs: we have adopted the same; and have, we hope, in treating on the verb, fully demonstrated its truth and simplicity; but, what will recommend it more than all the arguments that can be advanced in its favour is, the facility of retaining it, and its easy application, not only to the mother tongue, but to every other language which the learner may wish to acquire. However, in order to comply with the wishes of many respectable teachers, we have given the terms of the old nomenclature, along with those of the new-

The second part is altogether grammatical and critical, and contains the most extensive system of Spanish syntax, ever offered to the public.

The third part will give the student a thorough knowledge of mercantile correspondence, of the most approved form of bills of exchange, promissory notes, bills of lading, invoices, &c., in the Spanish and English languages, for the benefit of the Spanish, American, and British merchant.

This system of mercantile correspondence is entirely new, and has the peculiar advantage of embracing every circumstance of interest or moment, which may occur in mercantile affairs.

The fourth and last part, which concludes this volume, consists of Elegant Extracts in prose and verse, from the most eminent Spanish authors and translators: it may be said to form a garland of the most beautiful and flagrant flowers.

Having now given, we trust, a sufficient account of the objects embraced by this work, the method of using it comes next to be considered.

Of those who wish to be acquainted with it, we have now to request that they will peruse page 1, volume 1, of our book, and then observe the following exemplification.

The Spanish master, or any person who pronounces Spanish well, should read slowly to the learner the first phrase, syllable by syllable.

Compreme umd. un pan de tres libras.

The learner must syllabically repeat after his instructor, until his pronunciation is correct.

The same method is followed in other phrases of the same page.

The master ought to proceed to pages 138, 213, 269, where a few phrases are to be successively pronounced in the same manner as those in page 1.

In the analysis of the parts of speech, the learner is to be taught to pronounce one or two tenses of the verb haber.

The master should then proceed to pages 2 and 4, of the same work, and instruct his pupil in the pronunciation of the vowels and consonants.

The various phrases read to the scholar, with the tenses of the verb haber, he must commit to memory*, as well as all the letters which enter into the composition of every word, never losing sight of this fundamental principle, that the practice of a language, or the taculty of speaking it, is solely founded on that retentive faculty of the soul, which grammar can never impart. It will, I believe, be conceded to us, that language and grammar are two different objects, and consequently no way analogous; the former being physical, the latter, metaphysical.

We shall now proceed to recitation, which is here exemplified for the sake of perspicuity.

Master (reads slowly but aloud, vol. i, p. 1). Compreme vmd. un pan de tres libras.

Scholar (reciting the English and Spanish phrases successively), says,

Buy me a three pound loaf.

Compreme umd. un pan de tres libras.

Master. Pant.

Masculine.

Scholar. Loaf.

Pan, Masculine.

The other lessons, pages 138, 213, 269, are to be successively recited in the same manner.

As to the verb haber, vol. ii, the scholar is thus to recite it, without the master's help.

Infinitive.

Haber, to have, haber.

Particifiles.

Present.

Past.

Habiendo, having, habiendo.

and so on through the other tenses;

Habido, had, habido.

[•] Grammarians have continually confounded grammar with language, and vice versā. This strange perversion of ideas has been the cause of their ill success all over the world. Instead of boasting of teaching language by grammar (which was, in fact, placing the cart before the horse), they should have said, they taught grammar by language.

[†] Some may, perhaps, think it unaccountable, that the marginal words are to be recited after the phrases; but if they reflect that it is Nature's process (for a demonstration of this see the Introduction to the third edition of Nature Displayed applied to the French, page xx), and undoubtedly the best, since it teaches the learner to abstract from the phrases such words as the may want to use in combinations of his own, they will ultimately approve the scheme.

[‡] By this mode of using this work, it is evident, as the Spanish master has no occasion either for pronouncing or speaking English, that he may carry on

As the saving of time is highly important to the master, he will, as soon as a lesson is recited, make the pupil pronounce the following one, before he proceeds to the second lesson for recitation, &c.; but, previously to the new lesson of each part being read, he must repeat, in an audible voice, each English phrase, of the lesson just recited, and the pupil write down the Spanish phrase, which he should read as soon as written, to inform the master that he may proceed to read the next English phrase.

The reason why the English is to be read by the master instead of the Spanish is, that spelling is learned by the eye, and not by the ear; and by this mode he obliges his pupil to recollect the letters which he has seen in the composition of the words. Should the master, on the contrary, read the Spanish phrase instead of the English, the pupil, relying on his ear, which is not the proper organ on this occasion, will necessarily commit blunders.

Should the Spanish teacher be unacquainted with the English language, as in the case stated in the note, he would be under the necessity of reading the Spanish phrase.

When the scholar has well furnished his memory with a considerable stock of words and phrases, the auxiliary verbs haber and ser, and a few others that serve as a model in the Spanish conjugation, and has acquired a complete knowledge of the irregular verbs, together with the essential particulars explained in the analysis of the parts of speech, and which must keep pace with the scholar committing phrases to memory, he will absolutely understand Spanish when spoken to him, and be able to express his ideas in that language, &c. It will then be proper to introduce the learner to the selection of pieces contained in the Spanish Reader, which will be readily understood from the vast quantity of words and modes of expression stored in his memory*, and give him, at the same time, a the process of instruction without understanding that language: a very extraordinary advantage, peculiar to this method. (See the Introduction just cited, page xxii).

[•] There is no necessity for beginning to read authors very early; for, by learning the vecabularies, &c. in the manner we have proposed, we learn the three things which constitute the knowledge of a language, to understand, new lesson in that part of the work entitled "Syntax made Easy," the rule of which, with the exemplifications, should also be acquired by the memory. We shall observe concerning this syntax, that many of the rules which Mr. Dufief gives in his "Nature Displayed applied to the French" have been of service to us, as the French and Spanish syntax agree in many respects. We acknowledge it with so much the more pleasure, as several of those rules being original, and explained with great perspicuity, it cannot fail to stamp a value on our volume.

We earnestly recommend the learner to peruse (and he will be qualified for doing it from his progress in the Spanish language) "La Gramática Inglesa," to the rules of which he should pay much attention, and, by comparing together the Spanish and English examples which exemplify them, he will be enabled to observe how the two languages differ, a discovery which cannot fail to initiate him into the peculiarities of the Spanish. This comparative mode of learning syntax, supported by the reading of the best authors, appears to us to be both philosophical and effectual, as it is calculated to make a very lasting impression on the mind.

We have but a few words to say to those who, having gone through the course of the Spanish which we have laid before the reader, and which we deem sufficient for every social purpose whatever, feel ambitious of excelling in that language, and rivalling the most enlightened natives in the knowledge thereof. To such we point out the necessity of studying the graces of style, and the best models of composition, as the works of Calderon, Lopez de Vega, Cervántes, Garcilaso, Yriarte, Feijoo, Mariana, Solis, Don Juan de Ulloa, Don Jorge Juan, Muños de Castizo, Melendez Valdes, d'Iglesias, Noroña, Gaspard de Jovellanos, Antonio Moratin, Diego de Mendoza, Martin de Roa, Antonio de Fuentemayor, &c., which embrace every department of literature; whence they will speedily acquire a purity of style wholly free from Anglicisms.

speak, and read or write it. Application to books suited to the taste of a pupil will divide his attention (which should be wholly devoted to committing to memory the practical part), and, from the trouble of learning the phrases, especially in the beginning, will create a distaste to them.

When that perfection has been attained, the scholar may venture upon translating into Spanish some of the most interesting pieces of the English Reader. We feel happy in having shown, that even the parts of the first volume which seemed exclusively designed for the Spaniards, are of essential service to the English or Americans.

We cannot do better than conclude this introduction in the words of the discoverer of the Method of Nature.

"Having, I trust, fully satisfied the reader respecting this mode of instruction, I will venture, no longer able to resist the powerful voice of reason and experience, to say, that it is the most simple, expeditious, philosophical, and infallible method that can possibly be made use of; and, to avoid the unmerited charge of prejudice or prepossession in favour of it, I ingenuously acknowledge, that it is not my own, but NATURE's, suited to grown persons or children, who are capable of speaking and reading their mother tongue. I have no merit but in discovering that which others might have hit upon, and in applying this method of instruction to a particular language; showing, at the same time, that it is applicable to all others.

"Learning French by the shortest method possible is not the only advantage derived from the method of Nature. It also facilitates the acquisition of every other language, by the establishment of a universal mode: and often renovates the memory, by exercising, in a simple yet subtle manner, that noble faculty of the mind, while the judgment is improved and invigorated by a method founded on analogy and analysis, our unerring guides in the art of thinking. Observation has fully proved, that those who have learned French by the new mode have obtained much facility in their other studies."

DE LAS PARTES DE LA ORACION.

LAS palabras de que hacemos uso para expresar y manifestar nuestras ideas se llaman partes de la oracion, y son nueve; á saber:

Nombre,	Pronombre,	Adverbio,
Adjetivo,	Verbo,	Conjunction,
Artículo,	Preposicion,	Interjeccion

CAPÍTULO I.

DEL NOMBRE, Y DE SUS PROFIEDADES.

1. NOMBRE 6 Substantivo es aquella parte de la oracion, que sirve para nombrar 6 llamar las cosas y personas.

El nombre se divide en propio, comun, y abstracto. Nombre propio es el que conviene à una persona 6 cosa sola, como: Saavedra, Fernando, Madrid, Toledo. Nombre comun es el que conviene à todas las personas ó cosas de un género, 6 especie, como: hombre, man; filósofo, philosopher; casa, house; quarto, room. Nombre abstracto es el que representa un atributo ó una calidad como si fuera un objeto que exîste: v. g. corage, courage; patriotismo, patriotism; amor, love; nacimiento, birth; tiempo, time; eternidad; eternity; muerte, death

2. Dos cosas se han de considerar en los substantivos: el número y el género.

Los números son dos, singular y filural. Singular es el que habla de una persona ó de una cosa sola; filural es el que habla de dos ó mas cosas ó personas. En Ingles, se forma comunmente el filural añadiendo s al número singular, como:

Dog,	perro.	Dogs,	perros.
House,	casa.	Houses,	casas.
Chair,	silla.	Chairs,	sillas.
Son,	hijo. 🕶	Sons,	hijos.

Exceptúanse los substantivos que acaban en ch, ch, c, é x, que ferman su plural añadiendo ce al singular.

VOL. 1. 3.G

EXEMPLOS.

Brush,	cepillo.	Brushes,	cepillos.
Church,	iglesia.	Churches,	iglesias.
Glass,	vaso.	Glasses,	vasos.
Box,	caxa.	Boxes,	caxas.

Y tambien los que acaban en y, quando la precede una consonante, cuyo plural se forma entónces mudando la y en ies, como: quantity, cantidad; quantities, cantidades; city, ciudad; cities, ciudades, &c. Pero ha de observarse que, quando no precede una consonante á la y, solo ha de anadirse una e para la formacion del plural.

EXEMPLOS.

Day,	dia.	Days,	dias.
Ray,	rayo.	Rays,	rayos.*
· Valley,	valle.	Valleys,	valles.
Boy,	muchacho.	Boys,	muchachos.

3. Los substantivos que acaban en $f \circ fe$, forman el plural mudando estas terminaciones en ves, como:

Loaf,	pan.	Loaves,	panes.
Wife,	muger.	Wives,	mugeres.
Knife,	euchillo.	Knivee,	cuchillos.
Wolf,	lobo.	Wolves.	lobos.

De esta regla se exceptuan los nombres que siguen, cuyos plurales se forman añadiendo una e al singular.

EXEMPLOS.

pesar.	Gricfs,	pesares.
enano.	Dwarfs,	enanos.
perjuicio.	Mischiefs,	perjuicios.
pañuelo.	Handkerchiefs,	pañuelos.
xefe.	Chiefs,	xefes.
socorro, alivio.	Reliefs,	socorros.
manguito.	Muffs,	manguitos.
gorguera.	Ruffs,	gorgueras.
puño.	Cuffs,	puños.
pábilo.	Snuffe,	pábilos.
borla.	Puffs,	borlas.
peñasco.	Cliffs,	peñascos.
estofa.	Stuffs,	estofas.
esquife.	Skiffs,	esquifes.
	enano. perjuicio. pañuelo. xefe. socorro, alivio. manguito. gorguera. puño. pábilo. borla. peñasco. estofa.	enano. perjuicio. pañuelo. xefe. socorro, alivio. manguito. yuffs, puño. pábilo. borla. peñasco. cliffs, Muffs, puffs, puño. Cuffs, puffs, peñasco. cliffs, stuffs, stuffs, stuffs, stuffs, stuffs, stuffs,

Los nombres que acaban en oof, tambien forman el plural agregando una ..

4. Hay algunos que tienen la terminacion en al plural, como:

Mun,	hombre.	Men,	hombres.
Woman,	muger.	Women,	mugeres.
Child,	niño.	Children,	niños.
Ox, Brother,	buey. hermano.	Oxen,	bueyes.

5. Los siguientes son enteramente irregulares:

Die,	dado.	Dice,	dados.
Mouse,	raton.	Mice,	ratones.
Louse,	piojo.	Lice,	piojos.
Goose,	ganso.	Geese,	gansqua
Penny,	penique.	Pence,	peniques.
Tooth,	diente.	Teest,	dientes.
Deer,	gamo.	Deer,	gamos.
Foot;	pie,	Feet,	pies.
Sheep,	oveja.	Sheep,	ovejas.

6. Solo se usan en plural:

Ashes,	ceniza.	Lunge,	pulmones.
Annals,	anales.	Scissars,	tixeras.
Bellows,	fuelle.	Snuffers,	despabiladeras.
Bowels,	tripas.	Thanks,	gracias.
Breeches,	calzones.	Tongs,	tenazas.
Entrails,	entrañas.	Wages,	salario.

DEL GÉNERO.

Los géneros se distinguen generalmente, en Castellano, por las diferentes terminaciones de los substantivos; pero estas nunca varian en Ingles, porque los géneros se distinguen por el sexô; y así se puede decir:

- 1. Que todo nombre de varon y de animal macho es del género masculino.
- 2. Que todo nombre de muger y de animal hembra es del género femenino.
 - 3. Que todos los demas substantivos pertenecen al género neutro.

De suerte, que todas las cosas inanimadas, y los seres vivientes cuyo sexô no se conoce, son del género neutro.

Los substantivos man, hombre; son, hijo; ox, bucy; horse, caballo; son del género masculino, porque los dos primeros pertenecen á varones, y los otros dos á animales machos. Woman, muger; daughter, hija; cow, vaca; mare, yegua; son femenihos, porque son nombres pertenecientes á hembras: y book, libro; tree, árbol; letter, carta; house, casa; son del género neutro, porque son nombres de cosas inanimadas.

CAPÍTULO II.

DEL ADJETIVO.

NOMBRE adjetivo es el que se junta á los substantivos propios, comunes, ó abstractos, para darles alguna calificacion, explicando alguno de sus accidentes y propiedades: v. g.

Good	bueno.	Round,	redondo.
Bad,	malo.	Great,	grande.
Industrious,	laborioso.	Little,	pequeño.

Los adjetivos, en Español, siempre conciertan en número y género, pero la lengua Inglesa no requiere dicha concordancia; así, good significa igualmente bueno, buenos, buena, buenas: v. g.

The good father, el buen padre. The good mother, la buena madre. The good fathers, los buenos padres. The good mothers, las buenas madres.

Los nombres adjetivos que designan simplemente alguna calidad de los substantivos á que se juntan, sin aumentar ni disminuir la dicha calidad, se llaman positivos, como: fine, hermoso; wise, sabio; rick, rico.

Los que indican calidad, haciendo comparacion con otros, se llaman comparativos, y se forman, en Ingles, añadiendo er al positivo, ó solamente r si el adjetivo acaba en e: v, g.

Posite	ivo.	Comf	arativo.
Rich,	rico;	richer,	mas rico.
Fine,	hermoso;	finer,	mas hermoso.
Wise,	sabio;	wiser,	mas sabio.

Los que sin hacer comparacion expresan alguna calidad en sumo grado, se llaman superlativos, y se forman añadiendo al positivo la terminacion est, ó solamente st, si el adjetivo acaba en e, como:

Positivo.		Superlativo.
Rich,	rico;	richest,	riquísimo.
Fine,	hermoso;	finest,	hermosísimo.
Wise,	sabio;	wiscst,	sapientísimo.

Ademas de esta formacion, hay otra que comunmente se hace prefixando al positivo los adverbios more, mas; less, ménos; most, muy 6 · máxîmo; least, muy poco 6 mínimo.

More sirve para formar los comparativos de aumento, y less para los de diminucion: v. g.

Positivo.	: Comp	arativo.
	de aumento.	de diminucion.
Charitable,	more charitable,	less charitable.
Caritativo,	mas caritativo,	ménos caritativo.
Passionate,	more fiassionate,	less passionate. `
Apasionado,	mas apasionado,	ménos apasionado.

Most se usa para los superlativos de aumento, least para los de diminucion: v. g.

Superlativos.

de aumento.	de diminucion.
Most charitable,	least charitable.
Muy caritativo,	muy poco caritativo.
Most passionate,	least passionate.
Muy apasionado,	muy poco apasionado.

Ha de advertirse que los adjetivos, de una ó de dos sílabas, forman los comparativos añadiendo er ó r al positivo; y los superlativos añadiendo las letras est ó st, como queda dicho: pero los adjetivos de mas de dos sílabas forman sus comparativos y superlativos poniendo ántes del positivo los adverbios more y most.

Estas son las formaciones regulares de los grados de comparacion; sin embargo hay algunos adjetivos que admiten alguna leve alteracion, y á los que se les puede llamar irregulares.

Quando el positivo acaba en d, g, 6t, han de ponerse dos de estas consonantes, en los comparativos y superlativos, con tal que estén precedidas de una sola vocal: v.g.

Big,	bigger,	biggest.
Grueso,	mas grueso,	muy grueso.
Hot,	hotter,	hottest.
Caliente.	mas callente.	muv caliente.

Pero si á las letras d, g, o i preceden una consonante, o dos o mas vocales, no se requieren letras dobles para formar los comparativos y los superlativos.

EXEMPLOS.

Great,	greater,	greatest.
Grande,	mas grande ó ma	ayor, grandísimo.
Kind.	kinder,	kindest.
Cortes.	mas cortes.	muy cortes.

Quando el positivo acaba en y, precedida de una consonante, se forma el comparativo y superlativo mudando la y en ic: v. g.

Pretty,	prettier,	prettiest.
Lindo,	mas lindo,	muy lindo.
Lovely,	lovelier,	loveliest.
Amable,	mas amable,	muy amable 6 amabilisimo.

Hay algunos adjetivos cuyos comparativos y superlativos no se forman como queda dicho: tales son

Good,	better,	beat.
Bueno,	mejor,	óptimo.
Bad,	worse,	woret.
Malo,	peor,	pésimo.
Little,	less,	least.
Pequeño, •	menor,	mínimo.
Many 6 much,	more,	most. •
Muchos, mucho,	mas	muy, máxîmo, &c.

Los que siguen no admiten grados de significacion.

All, todo. Several, varios, muchos.

Each, cada. Very, muy.

Every, todo, cada. Some, algunos.

Any, qualquiera. One, two, three, &c. uno, dos, tres, &c.

CAPÍTULO III.

DEL ARTICULO Y DE SUS PROPIEDADES.

ARTÍCULO es una parte de la oracion que se junta á los nombres para señalar y determinar la persona ó cosa de que se habla. Los artículos son dos, en Ingles, a, uno ó una; y the, el, la, los, las.

El artículo a se llama indefinido, porque no determina el objeto particular de que se habla; el nombre, á que se junta, solo indica una persona ó cosa sin explicar ó determinar precisamente qual es la persona ó cosa: como, a king is dead, ha muerto un rey. El artículo the, de que hablamos: como, the king of France is dead, el rey de Francia ha muerto.

En Español, el artículo uno se muda en una delante de un nombre femenino, pero en Ingles no admite variacion alguna:

al contrario, se llama definido, porque determina el objeto particular

EXEMPLOS.

A boy, un mozo.
A girl, una moza.

Quando el nombre substantivo que sigue al artículo a, empieza con vocal, ó con h que no sea aspirada, el artículo a debe mudarse en an: como, an owl, un buho; an hour, una hora.

Uno, quando es nombre numeral, ha de expresarse en Ingles por

CAPÍTULO IV.

DEL PRONOMBRE.

PRONOMBRE es una parte de la oracion, que se usa en lugar del nombre para evitar su repeticion.

Hay cinco clases de pronombres: personales, posesivos, demonstrativos, relativos, é indefinidos.

Los pronombres personales son tres; á saber:

	Singular.	Plural.
1ª. persona,	I, yo.	We, nos, nosotros.
2*.	Thou, tu.	You, vos, vosotros.
3=.	He, él.	They, ellos 6 ellas.

I se pone en lugar de la persona que habla.

Thou en lugar de la persona à quien se habla.

He en lugar de la persona de quien se habla.

Los dos primeros I, thou, y sus plurales we, you, son comunes á los géneros masculino y femenino, sin variar la terminacion; pero el tercero, he, varía, en Ingles, para expresar el género del nombre á que se refiere.

	Singular.		$m{P}$ l $m{\mu}$ ral.
Masculino.	He,	él.	•	They, elios.
Femenino.	She,	ella.		They, ellas.
Neutro.	It.	él, ella, e	llo, lo.	They, ellos, ella	ts.

Los pronombres, en Ingles, tienen dos casos: nominativo y objetivo. El nominativo precede siempre a un verbo expreso 6 suplido; y el objetivo es siempre regido de un verbo activo 6 de alguna preposicion. Estos pronombres personales se declinan de este modo:

Singular.

	\mathcal{N} on	ninativ	o.	Obj	ietivo.
1ª. persona,	_	I,	yo.	Me,	me, mí.
22.		Thou	tú.	Thee,	te, tí.

vos, os, á vosotros ó vosotras.

Them, ellas, los, les, se.

Them, ellas, las, les, se.

Them, ellos, ellas, los, las, les, se.

Los pronombres personales compuestos guardan, en quanto á los casos, la misma regla que los simples: v. g.

		Singular.
	la. pers.	Myself, yo mismo 6 misma.
	2a.	Thyself, tú mismo ó misma.
		Masc. Himself, el mismo.
•	За.	Fem. Herself, ella misma.
		Neut. Itself, él mismo, ella misma.
		Plural.
la. pers.		Ourselves, nosotros mismos 6 nosotras mismas.
?a. •		Yourselves, vosotros mismos ó vosotras mismas.
	Masc.	Themselves, ellos mismos.
3a.		Themsetves, ellas mismas.
	Neut.	Themselves, ellos mismos 6 ellas mismas.

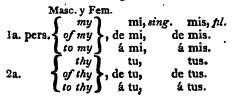

DE LOS PRONOMBRES O ADJETIVOS POSESIVOS.

Los pronombres 6 adjetivos posesivos son los que indican la posesion 6 pertenencia de alguna cosa 6 persona.

Algunos de estos pronombres posesivos se anteponen á los nombres substantivos, y se llaman conjuntivos, otros se llaman absolutos, y pueden emplearse en la oracion, sin necesidad de substantivo, quando se refieren á una persona ó cosa, que ha sido ya determinada.

BRONOMBRES Ó ADJETIVOS DEMONSTRATIVOS.

Los pronombres ó adjetivos demonstrativos son aquellos con que demostramos ó señalamos alguna persona ó cosa. Hay de dos especies. This, este, esta, esto; that, ese, esa, eso, aquel, aquella, aquello, al singular. These, estos, estas; those, esos, esas, aquellos, aquellas, al plural.

This señala y demuestra la persona 6 cosa que está cerca del que habla, y that la que está á alguna distancia.

Estos pronombres son comunes á los géneros masculino, femenino, y neutro.

PRONOMBRES RELATIVOS.

Los pronombres relativos son los que hacen relacion, y se refieren á alguna persona ó cosa de la que ya se ha hablado, y es lo que se llama ni uno, ninguno, &c.

antecedente. Los pronombres relativos no admiten variacion alguna en el género ni en el número.

> Who, que, quien. Which, que, qual, quales. That, que, &c. What, que, lo que, aquello que.

Los tres últimos no tienen mas que una terminacion; el primero, who, se muda en whom (que, quien, quienes) quando está regido por un verbo activo ó por alguna preposicion, y en whose (de quien, cuyo, cuya, &c.) quando significa posesion.

Who, which, what, se usan tambien como interrogativos.

PRONOMBRES INDEFINIDOS.

Los pronombres indefinidos son aquellos que no se refieren á cosa ni persona determinada. Hay algunos que comunmente son adjetivos; pero quando se encuentran solos en la oracion, han de considerarse como pronombres.

One, uno, una, se. Whatever, qualquiera, &c. Each, cada uno, cada una. Either, el uno ó el otro, &c. Several, muchos, varios, diversos, &c. Neither, ni el uno nivel otro, &c. Many, Mothing, nada. Every body, todos, cada uno, &c.

Every one, alguien, qual-None, ninguno, ninguna, &c. Nobody, nadie, ninguno, &c. No one, }
Not any, } Some one, \ quiera, &c. Some, uno, unos, alguno, &c. Any body, qualquiera, quienquiera. Whoever, Others, otros, c. Every thing, todo todos, toda, todas.

CAPÍTULO V.

DEL VERBO.

EL verbo es la parte de la oracion que significa la existencia, accion, ó pasion de las personas ó cosas, y consta de modos, tiempos, números, y personas. Se divide en verbo substantivo, activo, pasivo, neutro, y reciproco.

Verbo substantivo es el que significa la existencia de las cosas ó personas, como: 1 am, yo soy.

Verbo activo es aquel cuya accion y significación se dirige á otracosa, que es su objeto, como: I love Thomas, amo á Tomas.

Verbo pasivo es aquel que significa pasion, esto es, una accion recibida por la persona 6 cosa que hace de nominativo en la oracion, como: Thomas is loved by Peter, Tomas es amado de Pedro.

Verbo neutro se llama aquel cuya accion no se extiende á otra cosa, como: I sleep, duermo; he walks, anda.

Verbo rectproco es aquel, que empezando á expresarse por un nombre ó pronombre, da accion y movimiento al verbo, y vuelve su significacion á otro pronombre personal, que es el término de su accion.

CONJUGACION.

Llámase conjugacion de verbos la variacion de terminaciones que admiten en sus modos, tiempos, números, y personas. Esta variacion sucede así en Ingles como en Castellano, por medio de los verbos auxiliares ser y haber.

Vosotros os amais, &c. Ellos se aman, &c.

DE ALGUNAS IRREGULARIDADES Á QUE ESTÁN SU-JETOS LOS VERBOS REGULARES.

1. Para formar la segunda persona del singular del presente de indicativo han de añadirse al infinitivo las letras est; como por exemplo, to abandon, thou abandonest. Pero si el infinitivo acaba en e, solo se añadirá st para formar la segunda persona del singular del presente de indicativo; como, to love, thou lovest.

La tercera persona del singular se forma añadiendo una s al infinitivo: como, to abandon, to love, he abandons, he loves. Pero si acaba el infinitivo en h, s, x, ó z, se añadirá es: como, he wishes. To wish. he taxes. To tax, Cargar, Desear. él desea. él carga. he tosses. To buzz, To toss, he buzzes. Agitar, él agita. Zumbar, él zumba.

2. Quando el infinitivo acaba en y precedida de una consonante, la letra y se muda en ies para formar la tercera persona del singular del presente de indicativo: como, to carry, llevar; he carries, el lleva. Pero si á la y la precede una vocal, se anadirá solamente una s.

EXEMPLO.

To delay, he delays. To firay, he firays.
Tardar, él tarda. Rogar, él ruega.

3. El pretérito imperfecto de indicativo se forma, como ya se ha dicho, añadiendo ed al infinitivo, 6 solamente d si el infinitivo acaba en e: v. g. to abandon, he abandoned; to love, he loved.

Quando el infinitivo acaba en y, precedida de una consonante, la y se muda en i: como, to repliy, replicar; he replied, replicaba, ó replicó. Pero si á la y precede una vocal, se añadirá ed al infinitivo: como to delay, he delayed.

4. El participio presente 6 activo se forma comunmente anadiendo ing al infinitivo: como, to fear, fearing: pero si el infinitivo acaba en e se debe suprimir esta letra; v. g. to love, loving.

5. Los verbos que acaban en consonante precedida de una sola vocal, requieren esa consonante doble para formar el participio activo, el pasivo, y el pretérito imperfecto de indicativo.

EXEMPLO.

Infinitivo. Pretérito imperfecto y Participio activo.

To rap, rapped, rapping.
Golpear, golpeaba, golpeado, golpeando.

Exceptúanse de esta regla los verbos de dos ó mas silabas, que solo piden doble la consonante final quando el acento se halla sobre la última silaba.

EXEMPLO.

Infinitivo. Pretérito imperfecto y Participio activo. participio pasivo.

To abet, abetted, abetting. Excitar, excitaba, excitado, excitado.

El verbo to open, abrir, no requiere doble consonante, porque tiene el acento sobre la primera sílaba.

N. B. Los verbos acabados en ie, mudan estas dos letras en y, para formar el participio activo; como,

To die, dying. To lie, lying.

Morir, muriendo. Acostar, acostande.

Estos verbos, no obstante las irregularidades de que acabamos de hablar, se llaman regulares, porque forman el pretérito imperfecto y el participio pasivo conforme á la regla general.

DE LOS VERBOS IRREGULARES.

Verbos irregulares son los que, en la formacion del pretérito imperfecto del indicativo y del participio pasivo, varian, en algun modo, de las reglas que siempre guardan los regulares. Sigue la lista metódica de los verbos irregulares de la lengua Inglesa ordenada de este modo.

Los verbos compuestos tienen la misma irregularidad que los surples de los que se forman: $v.\ g.$

To come, I came, come.
To become, I became, become.

DE LOS SIGNOS DE LOS VERBOS, Ó VERBOS AUXÍ-LIARES DEFECTIVOS.

Estos signos, particulares á la lengua Inglesa, son do, did, shall, should, will, would, can, could, may, might, must, ought.

Do, did, sirven para dar mas fuerza á la expresion, ó para evitar la repeticion de algun verbo: v. g.

I do love you.

Yo le amo á vmd. You do not read as well as they do. | Vmd. no lee tan bien como ellos.

Do, did, tambien se emplean en todas las frases interrogativas 6 negativas en que no intervienen los verbos to be, to have, ú otros auxîliares defectivos: v. g.

What news do you bring?

How many ells docs it require to make a coat?

Did you receive any news from your father?

I do not understand what you say.

Did you not hear the sweet melody of her voice?

Qué noticias trae vmd.?

Quantas varas se necesitan para una casaca?

Ha recibido vmd. noticias de su padre?

No entiendo lo que vmd. dice.

No ha oido vmd. la dulce melodía de su voz?

Will y shall son signos que designan el futuro. Will, en la primera persona, denota promesa ó amenaza: como,

I will give you a guinca when you | Yo le daré a vmd. una guinca arc done.

We will punish you if you do not quando haya acabado.

Le castigarémos si vmd. no se enmienda.

Will, en la segunda y tercera persona, solo sirve para indicar lo que ha de suceder : v. g.

You will receive a letter to-mor-

The year will be plentiful.

Mañana recibirá vmd: una carta.

El año será abundante.

Shall se usa tambien en la primera persona meramente para anunciar lo que puede acaecer: v. g.

I shall set out as soon as Easter is over.

I shall come another day.

Partiré inmediatamente despuès de Pascua. Vendré otro dia.

Shall, en la segunda y tercera persona, denota promesa, obligación, deber, y algunas veces amenaza: v. g.

You shall have your money.

You shall come for me.

You shall be punished.

Vmd. tendrá su dinero.

Vmd. vendrá á buscarme.

Vmd. será castigado.

Se ha de observar que, en las sentencias interroguilvas, los signos will y shall tienen comunmente un sentido muy diferente; porque, en este caso, la promesa, amenaza, &c. se hacen por la persona á quien ó de quien se habla : v. g.

You shall have your money. Shall you have your money? You will remember to awake me.

Vmd. tendrá su dinero. Tendrá vmd. su dinero? V md. se acordará de despertarme.

Will you remember to awake me? | Se acordará vmd. de despertarme?

N. En las frases interrogativas nunca se debe usar el signo will para la primera persona: v. g. where shall I find any silk gloves? adonde hallaré guantes de seda?

Would y should son los tiempos pretéritos de will y shall, por consiguiente would indica. en la primera persona, obligacion, promesa, amenaza, y en la segunda y tercera solo anuncia lo que ha de suceder.

Should, al contrario, sirve en la primera persona para anunciar lo que pudiera acaecer, y en la segunda y tercera indica obligacion, promesa, ó amenaza.

EXEMPLOS.

If I were in town I would go to the play every night, and I believe ! you would be glad to go too.

If I were fond of riches, I would endeavour to get them.

It is necessary that you should come.

It is of importance that he should know it.

She says you would not go with me; but I say you should go in spite of you.

Si yo estuviera en la ciudad iria á la comedia todas las noches, y pienso que vmd. tambien iria con gusto.

Si yo amara las riquezas, procuraria adquirirlas.

Es menester que vmd. venga.

Importa mucho que lo sepa.

Dice que vmd. no iria conmigo; pero yo digo que vmd. iria à pesar suyo.

Would tiene algunas veces la significacion del verbo querer, y should la del verbo deber: pero se advierte que estos signos no pueden usarse siempre para expresar querer y deber.

Can y could indican el poder ó la facultad de hacer alguna cosa : v. g.

I can do it as well as you.

Yo lo nuedo hacer tan bien como

Though I was a prisoner, I could go to see my friends in the suburbs.

Aunque yo era prisionero, nodia ir á visitar á mis amigos en el arrabal.

May y might denotan el derecho, y la libertad de executar alguna cosa : v.g.

Iam a prisoner in this fortress, but | Soy prisonero en este castillo, pero I may walk on the ramparts when I please; and at first when I arrived here I might go out of it sometimes.

puedo pascarme en la muralla quando quisiere; y recien llegado, fiodia salir algunas veces fuera de él.

N. May y can se usan comunmente para denotar el presente, pero muchas veces expresan tiempo futuro: v.g.

She may come to-morrow. If you can come next week,

Podrá venir mañana. Si vmd. fiuede venir la semana en-

Must es un signo que indica necesidad, ú obligacion: v. g.

You wish to sell me your horse, | Vmd. desea venderme su caballo, sir, but before I buy him, I must see him.

señor mio, pero ántes que se le compre, es menester que le vea.

Ought sirve para significar la obligacion, importancia, ó necesidad absoluta de hacer alguna cosa: v. g.

Whatever is honest ought to be | Lo honesto debe preferirse a lo útil, preferred to what is useful and agrecable.

y á lo agradable.

CAPÍTULO VI.

DE LA PREPOSICION.

PREPOSICION es una parte indeclinable de la oracion, que se antepone á otras para expresar el verdadero sentido de relacion, 6 respecto que tienen entre si las cosas que designan: v.g.

I go to London.
I come from Madrid.
Whoever kills with the sword, shall die by the sword.
He bought a watch for thirty dollars.

Voy ά Lóndres.
Vengo de Madrid.
Quien ά hierro mata, ά hierro muere.
Compró un relox nor treinta pesos.

CAPÍTULO VII.

DEL ADVERBIO.

ADVERBIO es una parte indeclinable de la oracion que se junta al verbo para modificar su significacion, como: He speaks much, habla mucho; she sings well, canta bien; you write correctly, vmd. escribe correctamente: en cuyas expresiones los adverbios much, well, correctly, modifican la significacion de los verbos to speak, to sing, to write.

Los adverbios se subdividen en varias clases, segun la diferente significacion que tienen.

EN ADVERBIOS DE TIEMPO, COMO:

Presently, Now, To-day, Long ago,	luego. ahora. hoy. mucho ha.	Yesterday, To-morrow, Once, Formerly,	ayer. mañana. en el tiempo pasado. antiguamente, &c.
•	r	E LUGAR:
Where,	donde.	There,	allí.
Whence, .	de donde.	Thence,	de allí.
Here,	aquí.	Upon,	encima.
Within,	dentró.	Into.	dentro.
Without,	fuera.	Under,	debaxo, &c.
	DE C	ANTIDAD. COMO:

DE CANTIDAD, COMO

How much, Little,	quanto. , poco.	Much, Enough,	mucho. harto, bastante.
More,	mas.	Very,	muy, &c.
Less,	ménos.	•	•
VOL. I.		' 3 N

GRAMATICA INGLESA.

DE MODO, COMO:

Well,	bien.	Wisely,	sabiamente.
Right,	justo.	Prettily,	lindamente.
Bad, ill,	mal.	Bluntly,	åsperamente.

DE AFIRMACION, COMO:

Yes, Truly,	sí. verdaderamente.	Without doubt, \ sin duda.
Certainly,	ciertamente.	, , ,

DE NEGACION, COMO:

Νь,	not,	no,	ni

DE DUDA, COMO:

Perhaps,	quizá.	Probably,	probablemente.

DE COMPARACION:

More,	mas.	Worse,	peor.
Less,	ménos.	As much,	tanto.
Better,	mejor.	Almost,	casi.

DE INTERROGACION, COMO:

When ?	quando?	Why?	porque?
How?	como ?	How often?	quantas veces?

De casi todos los adjetivos Ingleses se pueden formar adverbios de modo, añadiéndoles la terminacion ly, que corresponde á la adverbial mente de nuestra lengua Castellana.

EXEMPLOS.

Particular,	particular;	Particularly,	particularmente.
Happy,	dichoso;	Happily,	dichosamente.
Infinite,	infinito;	Infinitely,	infinitamente.
Common, Assured,	comun ; seguro ;	Commonly, Assuredly,	comunmente.

El adverbio, como ya queda dicho, es una parte indeclinable de la oracion; pero hay algunos que admiten grados de comparacion, tales son los siguientes:

Positivo.	Comparativo.	Superlativo.
Often,	oftener,	oftenest.
A menudo,	mas á menudo,	muỳ á menudo.
Soon,	sooner,	soonest.
Pronto;	mas pronto,	muy pronto-

Los adverbios que derivan de adjetivos irregulares, son tambien irregulares en sus grados de comparacion, como:

Positivo.	Comparativo.	Superlativo.
Well,	better,	. best.
Bien,	mejor,	muy bien.
Ill,	worse,	worst.
Mal,	peor,	lo peor, pésimo.
Little,	less,	least.
Poco,	ménos,	lo ménos.

Los adverbios se dividen en simples y compuestos: los simples son los que constan de una sola voz, como: soon, presto; y los compuestos los que constan de dos ó mas voces, como: at present, ahora. Estos últimos se llaman tambien modos adverbiales.

CAPÍTULO VIII.

DE LA CONJUNCION.

CONJUNCION es una parte de la oracion que sirve para enlazar las palabras y las oraciones unas con otras. Los gramáticos dividen las conjunciones en varias clases; pero las que requieren particular atencion son las copulativas y disjuntivas.

Las copulativas son las que enlazan simplemente unas palabras con otras, y las oraciones entre sí, como: and, y; y las disyuntivas las que indican division ó alternativa entre las cosas, como: but, pero.

EXEMPLOS.

John reads and Thomas writes. Juan lee y Tomas escribe.

Juan lee pero Tomas escribe.

CAPÍTULO IX.

DE LA INTERJECCION.

INTERJECCION es una palabra que sirve para expresar los varios afectos del ánimo, ó para llamar la atencion; las mas usuales son:

Ah! ah!	Come on!
Alas! ay!	Cheer up! corage! animo!
Well! ea!	Courage!
Right! bueno! bien!	Encore! otra vez!
Egad! pshaw! soga! porquerías!	Hold! para!
Fye! fye upon! puf! que ver-	Softly! quedito!
güenza!	Hist! hush! quieto! chiton!

Oh! oh! oh! ha! ha! ha! Oh ho! so ho! oh! hola! Huzza! viva, viva el rey! How! what! como! qué! Fiddlestick ! bagatela ! Lack-a-day! hola! Good God! Dios mio!
Bless me! misericordia! Zounds! diablos, dianche, voto 'Sdeath! á tal! válgame Dios! 0!0! 'Odsbud! &c. Away! fuera! vaya! Egad! Holo! ah!

DE LA SINTÁXIS.

CAPÍTULO I.

SINTAXIS es el órden y arreglo que deben tener las palabras entre sí para formar la oracion. Consta de dos partes, concordancia y régimen.

Concordancia es aquella parte de la gramática que requiere que una palabra concierte en persona, número, y género con otra de la misma oracion ó sentencia.

Régimen es la dependencia que tienen en la oracion una parte de ofras.

CAPÍTULO II.

DEL NOMBRE.

1. EL nombre sustantivo quando hace de nominativo en una oracion se coloca generalmente antes del verbo:

EXEMPLOS.

Beauty may be seen, but not wit.

The soldiers wait in silence for the Los soldados esperan en silencio signal.

in the organ of sight.

Bien se pueder ver la hermosura, pero no el ingenio.

Squinting eyes bespeak a defect | Los ojos bizcos indican algun defecto en el órgano de la vista.

Tambien se puede poner el nominativo despues de un verbo neutro, como en el exemplo siguiente:

The army entered the town at | El exército entró en la ciudad á noon, and soon after arrived the mediodia, y de allí á poco llegó el general.

El nominativo se pone despues de los verbos siguientes quando se emplean en una oracion, entre paréntesis.

To say, To reply, decir. replicar.

To answer, To continue. To pursue, To cry, To exclaim, responder. continuar. proseguir. exclamar.

EXEMPLOS.

No people are wiser than we, said the old man; we have the most wholesome laws, and no republic is so well regulated as ours.

Brother, replied the friar, experience has made me wise.

For my part, answered his highness, I insist on my right to the crown.

No hay gente mas sabia que nosotros, dixo el viejo; tenemos las mas saludables leyes, y no hay república tan bien gobernada como la nuestra.

Hermano, replicó el frayle, la experiencia me hizo sabio.

Por mi parte, respondió su alteza, insisto en mi derecho á la coro-

En los exemplos que preceden la construccion es casi la misma en ámbas lenguas; pero en Español el nominativo se pone frequentemente despues de un verbo activo que rige al relativo que, precedido de otro nombre ó pronombre; como:

Este es el relox que me dió mi hermano.

En la lengua Inglesa la construccion es distinta, porque el nominativo debe preceder siempre al verbo, v. g.

This is the watch which my brother gave me.

2. El objetivo se coloca comunmente despues del verbo activo ó de una preposicion:

EXEMPLOS.

I have received your letter. God will reward the just. Your cousin came with my uncle. Su primo vino con mi tio.

He recibido su carta. Dios recompensará á los justos.

En Castellano, la preposicion de precede siempre al posesivo 6 genitivo; como: el sombrero de Pedro. Pero en Ingles puede decirse de dos modos diferentes.

El primero anadiendo al nombre una s precedida de un apóstrofo, y entónces se omite la preposicion, como:

Peter's hat.

El sombrero de Pedro.

En este exemplo el nombre sombrero se expresa al principo en Español, y en Ingles á lo último; y la letra s con el apóstrofo corresponde al artículo el y á la preposicion de.

Pero si en la frase Española se hallara un artículo que designase el segundo sustantivo, dicho artículo deberá preceder en Ingles al primer substantivo.

EXEMPLOS.

The queen's garden.
The general's regiment.
You speak of the king's vessels.
They speak of the lady's house.

El jardin de la reyna.
El regimiento del general.
Vmd. habla de los navíos del rey.
Ellos hablan de la casa de la señora.

Quando el substantivo se emplea en plural, se omite la s que indica el posesivo, y solo se añade el apóstrofo.

EXEMPLO.

The fleasants' cottages.

Las chozas de los aldeanos.

Tambien se omite algunas veces la sen el singular en los nombres que acaban en se; como: Your-mistress' sister is gone, la hermana de su ama se ha ido.

Si el nombre no acaba en sen el plural, en este caso se necesita una para determinar el genitivo, pero se omite el apóstrofo.

EXEMPLOS:

The childrens noise. The mens coats. The womens shoes. El ruido de los niños. Los vestidos de los hombres. Los zapatos de las mugeres.

Si los nombres tienen la misma terminacion en el plural y en el singular, se colocará el apóstrofo del modo siguiente.

The sheep's wool. The sheeps' wool.

La lana de la oveja. La lana de las ovejas.

Quando el poseedor de qualquiera cosa está expresado en la frase por circunlocucion, en este caso el signo de genitivo se pone despues del último nombre; como:

Lubin the farmer's house. John our miller's wife.

La casa del grangero Lubin. La muger de nuestro molinero Juan.

Quando dos 6 mas nombres que están en genitivo se hallan unidos por una partícula conjuntiva, el signo de posesion debe ponerse solamente en el último.

EXEMPLO.

William, Joseph, and Edward's La propiedad de Guillelmo, de Joproperty.

La propiedad de Guillelmo, de Joproperty.

Pero quando no hay conjuncion en la sentencia, a cada nombre debe ponerse el signo de genitivo; como: The general's son's servant's | El caballo del criado del hijo del horse.

El signo del genitivo se pone algunas veces no solo en lugar del artículo y de la preposicion, como queda dicho, sino aun en el del nombre de la persona ó cosa poseida, especialmente quando se responde á una pregunta.

EXEMPLO.

Whose book is that? It is John's.

De quien es ese libro? Es de Juan.

El nombre book se suple despues de John. Este modo de hablar se usa frequentemente al fin de una sentencia, para evitar la repeticion del nombre ó para omitir el pronombre demonstrativo; como:

I despise Henry's conduct, but I Desprecio la conducta de Henriesteem Anthony's.

Desprecio la conducta de Henrique, pero aprecio la de Antonio.

El signo del genitivo puede tambien expresar la morada 6 residencia de algun sugeto, quando no es seguido de un nombre.

EXEMPLO.

I have been at M. Dubarry's. | He ido á casa del Señor Dubarry.

Lia palabra house se suple despues del nombre Dubarry's.

El segundo modo de formar el posesivo es en todo conforme con la regla que guarda el genitivo Español.

EXEMPLO.

The situation of the town.

La situacion de la ciudad.

La sola diferencia que hay entre estos dos modos de formar el posesivo Ingles, consiste en que usamos del primero quando el nombre al genitivo indica una cosa animada ó criatura viviente, y del segundo, quando el nombre designa una cosa inanimada: en estas claúsulas.

The king's palace.
The houses of the city.

El palacio del rey. Las casas de la ciudad.

El substantivo king indicando una criatura viviente, requiere el signo de genitivo 's; y city requiere la proposicion of, porque es nombre de cosa inanimada.

Pero debe observarse que el genitivo se forma algunas veces por medio de la preposicion of, aun quando el nombre indica una criatura viviente; lo que suele suceder siempre que no denota posesion, sino cierta relacion entre dos cosas que se correspondan recíprocamente una à otra; como:

The age of Lewis XIV.

El siglo de Luis XIV.

En este exemplo el genitivo no expresa posesion, porque no se puede decir que el siglo pertenecia á Luis.

Ademas de las reglas que quedan explicadas acerca del modo de designar el genitivo Ingles, es muy del caso seguir la práctica de los autores clásicos y de las personas que hablan con pureza.

Quando el nombre que precede la preposicion de denota la materia de que se forma la cosa que expresa el primer substantivo, se omite la dicha preposicion, pero debe ponerse un guion entre ambos substantivos

EXEMPLOS.

A straw-hat.

A gold-watch.

A silver-spoon.

Un sombrero de paja.
Un relox de oro.
Una cuchara de plata.

Tambien deben anteponerse, en Ingles, los substantivos, quando en la frase Castellana el segundo denota el destino de la cosa que indica el primero; como:

A school-master.
A dog-collar.

Un maestro de escuela. Un collar de perro.

Lo mismo se observará quando el segundo nombre designe la naturaleza, 6 especie que expresa el primero; como:

River-fish. Sea-water. Water-snake.

Pez de rio. Agua de mar. Culebra de agua.

E igualmente quando el primer nombre en la frase Española indica una cosa que sea parte de la que designe el segundo; como:

The chamber-window. The garden-gate.
The ax-handle.

La ventana del quarto. La puerta del jardin. El mango de la hacha.

CAPÍTULO III.

DEL ADJETIVO.

EN Español, comunmente se antepone el substantivo al adjetivo; como:

Un hombre rico. Un vestido negro. Un pañuelo blanco.

Pero, en Ingles, se pospone siempre: v. g.

A rich man.
A black coat.
A white handkerchief.

VOL. I.

3 O

Se exceptuan los adjetivos que expresan la dimension, que se posponen al substantivo, como en el exemplo siguiente.

A river three leagues broad. | Un rio de tres leguas de ancho.

En Ingles, en las frases que expresan dimension se hace uso del verbo to be; como:

The chamber is twenty feet long.

The tower is two hundred feet high.

El quarto tiene veinte pies de largo.

La torre tiene docientos pies de alto.

N. En las frases que siguen y en otras semejantes, el adjetivo se pospone generalmente al substantivo.

A man generous to his enemies. Un hombre generoso con sus enemigos.

To make virtue amiable. Para hacer amable la virtud.

La conjuncion que que sigue á los comparativos mas ó ménos, se traduce en Ingles por than.

EXEMPLOS.

Lucinda is handsomer than Dorothea.

Lucinda es mas hermosa que Dothea.

He is more courageous than his El es mas atrevido que su compeadversary.

But his adversary is less barbarous Pero su competidor es ménos fethán he. Pero su competidor es ménos fe-

De 6 que, precedidos de mas 6 de ménos, y seguidos de un nombre numeral, se exprimen en Ingles por than.

EXEMPLOS.

I have more than sixty guineas.

He received more than a half of his money.

Tengo mas de sesenta guineas.

Recibió mas de la mitad de su dinero.

Tan, seguido de como, despues de un adjetivo, se exprime por as, y como se expresa tambien por as.

EXEMPLO.

We are as learned as you. | Nosotros somos tan doctos como vmds.

Quando está seguido de que, este se traduce por that y tan por so.

EXEMPLO.

He is so weak that he cannot walk | Está tan débil que no puede andar-Quando no se sigue que, tan debe expresarse por so; como: It is rare to find a man so brave, so | No es comun hallar a un hombre modest, and so humane.

tan valiente, tan modesto, y tan

Tanto, fanta, tantos, tantas en las frases negativas se expresan por so much, so many; en las afirmativas por as much, as many: el como que sigue ha de expresarse por as.

He has as much money as I, but he has not so muchias you.

He has as many guineas as I, but he has not so many friends.

Tiene tanto dinero como yo, pero no tiene tanto como vmd. Tiene tantas guineas como yo, pero no tiene tantos amigos.

Quando á tanto, tantos, &c. no sigue como, se emplean las voces so much 6 so many; como:

ny crimes, ought to be punished.

A man who has committed so ma- | Un hombre que ha cometido tantos crimenes, debe ser castigado.

Que despues de un superlativo se expresa en Ingles por that.

EXEMPLOS.

The worst road that I have seen. The handsomest woman that can | La muger mas hermosa que se be seen.

El peor camino que he visto. puede ver.

CAPÍTULO IV.

DE LOS ARTICULOS.

1º. EL artículo indefinido a ha de ponerse ántes de un substantivo quando se habla en singular solamente.

A horse is stronger than a man.

Un caballo es mas fuerte que un hombre.

Tambien se pone ántes de las voces few (pocos, pocas), y great many (muchos, muchas), aunque se habla en plural; como:

He has a few horses and a great | Tiene nocos caballos y muchas vamany cows.

A los nombres numerales hundred, ciento; y thousand, mil, debe preceder el artículo a; en Español se suprime dicho artículo.

EXEMPLO.

A hundred men and a thousand | Cien hombres y mil mugeres. women.

Quando al comparativo tan precede un, una, y un substantivo, y sigue inmediatamente un adjetivo, el artículo se coloca entre el adjetivo y el substantivo.

EXEMPLO.

I have never read so good a book. | Nunca he leido un libro tan bueno.

Tambien se coloca entre el adjetivo such y el substantivo que califica; como:

Have you ever heard talk of such I Ha oido vmd. hablar jamas de sca thing? Mr. such a one has been here tomejante cosa?

Fulano ha estado aquí hoy.

En Español, el artículo indefinido se omite ántes de los nombres que significan oficios, profesiones, títulos, &c. pero debe expresarse en . Ingles.

EXEMPLOS.

I am a carpenter. He is a captain. She is a widow. He is a stranger. You are a Spaniard. I am a Frenchman.

Yo soy carpintero. El es capitan. Ella es viuda. El es extrangero. Vmd. es Español. Yo soy Frances.

2º. El artículo definido que se pone, en Español, ántes de los nombres que expresan peso, medida, ó ántes de los nombres numerales, se exprime, en Ingles, por el artículo indefinido.

EXEMPLOS.

· I sell my coffee at eleven pence a pound.

You sell your lace at ten shillings an ell.

He has bought some chickens at twelve shillings a dozen.

They have bought some ducks, at three shillings and sixpence a picce.

Yo vendo el café á once peniques la libra.

Vmd vende sus encaxes á diez shilines la ana.

Ha comprado algunos pollos á doce shilines la docena.

Han comprado algunos patos á tres shilines y seis peniques cada uno.

El artículo indefinido se usa, en Ingles, al principio de una frase que se introduce en medio ó al fin de otra, y sirve para facilitar el sentido de ella.

EXEMPLOS.

I have read the Revenge, a cele- | He leido la Venganza, tragedia brated tragedy of Dr. Young's, and the Jealous Wife, an excellent comedy of Colman's. William Bingham, a citizen of the United States.

célebre del Doctor Young, y la Muger Zelosa, comedia excelente de Colman. Guillelmo Bingham, ciudadano de los Estados Unidos.

Quando al pronombre que sigue un nombre, en las frases de admiracion, debe exprimirse por what, y el artículo indefinido.

EXEMPLOS.

What a man! Qué hombre! What a woman! Qué muger! . What a horse! Qué caballo! What a pity! Qué lástima! What a fine country! Qué hermoso pais!

3º. El artículo definido the (el, la, los, las) se pone al principio de los nombres comunes y no de los propios.

Los nombres propios de paises, islas, provincias, y estados no requieren artículo en Ingles.

EXEMPLOS.

France has been divided into one hundred and three departments. Portugal lies west of Spain.

Prussia was erected into a kingdom in the year 1701. Jamaica belongs to England.

Sweden is larger than France.

Savoy was conquered by the French, in the year 1792.

La Francia ha sido dividida en ciento y tres departamentos.

El Portugal está al ueste de España.

La Prusia fué erigida en reyno en el año 1701.

La Jamaica pertenece á la Ingla-

La Suecla es mayor que la Francia.

La Savoya fué conquistada por los Franceses en el año 1792.

Así, en Castellano como en Ingles, se pone el artículo definido ántes de los nombres propios de mares y rios; como:

Mediterranean.

I have crossed the Thames several times in a boat.

France lies to the north of the La Francia está al norte del mar Mediterránco.

He pasado muchas veces el Támesis en un bote.

Quando los nombres propios de personas están en plural, debe usarse del artículo.

EXEMPLOS.

The Stuarts were pitiful kings. | Los Stuartes fuéron reyes piadosos.

El artículo definido se suprime, en Ingles, quando se expresan nom bres comunes y abstractos, hablando en un sentido general.

EXEMPLOS.

Wine is good.

Ingratitude is the most odious of Poetry and painting are sisters, admired only by people of taste.

Should we not consider old men, women, and children as sacred in war?

El vino es bueno.

La ingratitud es el mas odioso de los vicios.

La pocesía y la pintura son dos hermanas que solo las gemes de gusto admiran.

Los viejos, las mugeres, y los niños no deberian ser considerados en la guerra como objetos sagrados ?

Pero quando estos nombres expresan un sentido determinado, entónces requieren artículo al principio.

EXEMPLOS.

The wine that is on the table is

The women who arrived last week.

El vino que está en la mesa es bueno. Las mugeres que llegáron la semana pasada.

Quando un substantivo se usa en singular para expresar los individuos de una misma clase 6 especie, requiere el artículo.

EXEMPLOS.

the senator wise. The horse is a useful animal. The wolf cats the sheep.

The soldier ought to be brave, and | El soldado debe ser valiente, y el senador prudente. El caballo es un animal útil. El lobo se come la oveja.

Los adjetivos que se emplean como substantivos siguen la misma regla.

EXEMPLOS.

The rich are often unhappy.

The poor are often content.

Los ricos son muchas veces desgraciados.

Las pobres regularmente viven contentos.

The covetous are seldom honest.

The lazy are generally poor.

Los codiciosos son raramente honrados.

Los perezosos son generalmente pobres.

Pero quando se habla de un solo individuo de una especie, el adje. tivo ha de expresarse antes del substantivo; como:

The perfidious man. The perfidious woman. The lazy man. The lazy woman.

El hombre pérfido. La muger pérfida. El hombre perezoso. La muger perezosa.

Quando se usan los substantivos man, hombre, y woman, muger, para designar á todos los hombres y á todas las mugeres, no necesitan de artículo en Ingles, aunque en semejante caso se emplea en Castellano.

EXEMPLOS.

Man is the lord of the carth.

Woman is the master-piece of nature.

El hombre es el árbitro de la tier-

La muger es la primera obra ó la obra maestra de la naturaleza.

Los nombres de cosas singulares requieren generalmente el artículo: como, the sun, el sol; the moon, la luna; the world, el mundo; &c. Exceptúanse los nombres heaven, el cielo; hell, el infierno, que no le necesitan.

La palabra God, Dios, se emplea sin artículo, pero la palabra devil, demonio, le requiere.

El artículo definido es necesario, en Ingles, para expresar todos los individuos de una misma secta, comunidad, ó nacion, &c.

EXEMPLOS.

The Huguenots were expelled from France by the edict of Nantz.

The Benedictines were a rich order of monks.

The Spaniards are a grave people. Los Españoles son graves.

Los Hugonotes ó Calvinistas fuéron expelidos de Francia en consequencia del edicto de Nántes. La órden de Benedictinos era muy rica.

En Español el artículo se repite al principio de los nombres que forman una misma sentencia, pero en Ingles se omite.

EXEMPLO.

The blossoms, leaves, and root | La flor, las hojas, y ia raiz de las of the mallow, have many virtues.

malvas, tienen varias propiedades.

CAPÍTULO V.

DEL PRONOMBRE.

. SE ha visto en la primera parte de esta gramática, que los pronombres personales de la primera y segunda persona son comunes á los géneros masculino y femenino, y que el de la tercera he forma su femenino en she y el neutro en it. Estos pronombres han de emplearse en la oracion como se dirá.

1. En Castellano se suprimen muchas veces los pronombres en nominativo, pero en Ingles deben expresarse siempre antes de los verbos.

EXEMPLOS.

I travelled in Europe with your | He viajado en Europa con su herbrother.

Thou art in the right.

He has given his niece ten thousand dollars as a marriage-portion.

We have found a treasure.

You are sensible that nothing is more agreeable.

They fear God.

Tienes razon.

Ha dado de dote á su sobrina diez mil pesos.

Hemos encontrado un tesoro.

Sabeis que no hay cosa mas agradable.

Temen á Dios.

El pronombre he designa el masculino, she el femenino, é it el neutro.

EXEMPLOS.

That man is rich, and he is wise | Ese hombre es rico, y tambien

That lady is good, and she is handsome too.

That door is high, and it is broad

That knife is long, and it is sharp prudente.

Esa señora es buena, y hermosa tambien.

Esa puerta es alta, y tambien ancha.

Ese cuchillo es largo, y afilado tambien.

Si la tercera persona del singular se refiere á un substantivo que sea un ser viviente, y cuyo género no se conozca se usará del pronombre neutro it; como:

> He has a handsome child. How old is it? I have a calf. Is it young?

Si el género es conocido, se usará del pronombre he para el masculino, y de she para el femenino.

2. En Castellano, el pronombre objetivo se pone comunmente antes del verbo, pero en Ingles debe ponerse despues.

EXEMPLOS.

He told me that. I love him. I will speak to him. He promised it to me. I will show it to you. Do not deceive me. Do not send it to me.

El me ha dicho eso. Yo le amo. Yo le hablaré. El me lo ha prometido. Yo se le enseñaré. No me engañe vmd. No me lo envie vmd.

3. El pronombre neutro lo puede expresarse, en Ingles, de tres modos diferentes: 1to. por so, 2te. por el participio del verbo á que se refiere, 3te. por el pronombre neutro it.

Se expresa por so, quando está seguido del verbo ser ó estar, y que es al mismo tiempo relativo de un substantivo ó adjetivo; como:

You are learned, and he is not so. You are an honest man, and he is not so.

Vmd. es docto, y él no lo es. Vmd. es hombre honrado, y él no lo es.

Quando el pronombre lo se refiere á un verbo, se emplea, en Ingles, el participio de dicho verbo.

EXEMPLO.

standing makes me esteem it as much as it deserves to be esteemed.

The superiority of your under- | La superioridad del entendimiento de vmd. nie induce á estimarle tanto como lo merece.

Muchas veces se suple el adverbio so ó el participio despues del verbo to be; como:

You are esteemed as you deserve | Vmd. es estimado como lo me-

Vmd. no es pobre, y yo lo soy.

You are not poor, and I am.

Quando lo se refiere á una sentencia entera, generalmente se expresa

EXEMPLO.

ing, and I wish it.

They say that the master is com- | Dicen que el maestro viene, así lo deseo.

Pero quando está seguido de los verbos decir, to say; creer, to believe; hensar, to think, se expresa por so; como:

They say that the master is com- | Dicen que el maestro viene, y lo ing, and I believe so. creo.

VOL. I.

por it.

3 P

Obsérvese que algunas veces puede usarse indiferentemente de so 6 de it despues de dichos verbos, pero puede seguirse sin inconveniente la regla general.

CAPÍTULO VI.

DE LOS PRONOMBRES Ó ADJETIVOS POSESIVOS.

1. LOS pronombres posesivos conjuntivos se colocan, así en Ingles como en Castellano, ántes de la persona ó cosa poseida.

EXEMPLOS.

Did you see my book and my hand- | Ha vista vmd. mi libro v mi pakerchief?

Thy sisters, brothers, and all thy relations dined with me.

ñuelo ₹

Tus hermanas y hermanos, y los demas de tu parentela comiéron conmigo.

En los pronombres posesivos como en los personales, no varía la terminacion del masculino ni del femenino, excepto la tercera persona del singular, en que el masculino se expresa por his, el femenino por her, y el neutro por ita. El plural de estos tres pronombres es their.

EXEMPLOS.

Tell me of your son's courage, and not of his beauty.

Do not tell me of your daughter's courage, tell me of her beauty.

Talk to me of the usefulness of a book, and not of its binding.

Men are admired for their courage.

Women are admired for their

Books are valued for their usefulness.

Hábleme vmd. del valor de su hijo, y no de su hermosura.

No me hable vmd. del valor de su hija, hábleme de su belleza.

Hableme vmd. de la utilidad de un libro, y no de su enquadernacion. Admiramos á los hombres por es valor.

Admiramos á las mugeres por su belleza.

Apreciamos los libros por eu utili-

Aunque en Castellano puede emplearse el artículo definido en lugar del pronombre posesivo, en Ingles ha de usarse siempre del último: como: • .

I cut my fingers. You wash your face.

Me he cortado los dedos. Vmd. se lava la cara.

Quando el verbo tener precede al artículo definido, ha de expresarse en Ingles por el verbo to be.

EXEMPLOS.

Her heart is very hard. His arms are very long.

Tiene el corazon muy duro. · Tiene los brazos muy largos.

En Castellano se repiten todos los pronombres posesivos que se refieren á una misma persona ó cosa, pero en Ingles se emplean solamente antes del primer nombre.

EXEMPLO.

My father, mother, and sisters | Mi padre, mi madre, y mis herlove you. manas aman á vind.

2. Los pronombres posesivos absolutos no necesitan artículo en ingles.

EXEMPLOS.

My son is younger than yours. His sister is older than mine.

Mi hijo es mas jóven que el suyo. Su hermana es mayor que la mia.

Dichos pronombres conciertan en Ingles en número y género con la persona que posée y no con la cosa poseida.

EXEMPLOS.

Whose pen is that? It is his.

Da quien es esa pluma? Es suya.

Whose hats are these? They are | De quien son estos sombreros? hers.

Son suyos.

La preposicion de, que, ántes de un pronombre personal, indica, en Español, la posesion de alguna cosa, se omite en Ingles, y el pronombre personal se expresa por uno posesivo absoluto.

EXEMPLOS.

These books are theirs.

Estos libros son de ellos.

Quando la preposicion de precede á un nombre, con artículo ó sinél, dicho nombre requiere al fin de él el signo del genitivo.

EXEMPLOS.

These horses are John's. This is the boy's hat.

Estos caballos son de Juan. Este es el sombrero del muchacho.

CAPÍTULO VII.

DE LOS PRONOMBRES Ó ADJETIVOS DEMONSTRATIVOS.

EN la primera parte de esta gramática, se ha dicho que los pronombres demonstrativos no tenian variacion alguna de género, y que solo concordaban en número con el nombre que determinan; ahora se va á indicar la diferencia que hay en el uso de ellos.

1. Quando se habla al presente, se usa del demonstrativo this; como:

Este es el siglo de revoluciones. This is the age of revolutions.

2. Se usará de that quando se hable de tiempo pasado.

EXEMPLO.

That age was the age of miracles. Aquel siglo fué el siglo de mila-

3. Si se trata de cosas que se pueden ver ú oir, se usará de this o these por las que están cerca de la persona que habla, y de that o those por los que están á alguna distancia.

MEMPLOS.

This man has lost all sense of hu- | Este hombre ha perdido todo senmanity.

timiento de humanidad.

That country is very distant from,

Ese pais está muy distante del nuestro.

El que, la que, aquel que, &c. se expresan por this which, that which, &c. quando se refieren a cosas inanimadas.

EXEMPLO.

This which I have in my hand, is | El que 6 la que tengo en mi mabetter than that which you have given me.

no, es mejor que el que ó la que vmd. me ha dado.

El que, la que, aquel que, &c. se expresan por un pronombre personal seguido de su relativo quando se refieren á alguna persona.

EXEMPLO.

not to eat.

He of she who will not work, ought | El of la que no quiere trabajar, no debe comer.

Quando el, la, aquel, &c. se refieren á una persona, y están regidos de un verbo ó de una preposicion, se expresarán, en Ingles, por los pronombres objetivos him, her, &c.

EXEMPLO.

I do not love him 6 her who will No amo al que 6 á la que no not work.

Quando los plurales se refieren á personas, se exprimen por these ó those, ó por el pronombre personal they.

EXEMPLO.

Those who are wise are happy.

Los que son sabios ó prudentes

They who are wise are happy.

Los que son sabios ó prudentes son felices.

These y those pueden usarse tambien al objetivo, como en el exemplo siguiente.

We love those who are wise.

Amamos á los que son prudentes.

Los neutros esto, eso, ó aquello, se exprimen el primero por this, y los otros dos por that.

EXEMPLOS.

This displeases me very much. Esto me desagrada mucho. What do you think of that? Qué piensa vmd. de eso?

CAPÍTULO VIII.

DE LOS PRONOMBRES RELATIVOS.

EL relativo que, quando se refiere á personas, se expresa en Ingles por who, cuyo objetivo es whom.

EXEMPLOS.

The mother who loves her chil- La madre que ama a sus hijos. dren.

The orator who spoke this morning, whom you admired so much, and to whom so much praise is due: El orador que peroró hoy por la mañana, á quien vmd. admiró tanto, y á quien son debidas tantas alabanzas:

De quien se traduce en Ingles por of whom; como:

The man of whom I spoke to you. El hombre de quien he hablado a vmd.

Of whom do you speak?

De quien habla vmd.?

Pero muchas veces, en lugar de poner of antes de whom, se pone en el remate de la clausula.

EXEMPLOS.

The man whom I spoke to you of.
Whom do you speak of?

De este modo pueden colocarse tambien las demas preposiciones, y todos los pronombres relativos que están regidos de ellas.

EXEMPLOS.

Whom do you owe money to?
What do you talk of?
The study which I apply myself to.

Let estudio \(\delta \) que me aplico.

Whose, el genitivo de who, debe traducirse por cuyo, cuya, cuyas.

EXEMPLO.

God, whose works we admire. Dios, cuyas obras admiramos.

Which &s un pronombre relativo que se usa quando se habla de animales ó de cosas inanimadas, y no muda su terminacion para formar el objetivo.

EXEMPLOS.

The bird which sang this morning.

The field of which I speak to you.

The tree to which he was tied.

The branch to which he was hung.

El paxaro que ha cantado esta mañana.

El campo de que hablo á vmd.

El árbol á que fué atado.

La rama en la que fué ahorcado.

El relativo that puede usarse en lugar de who, de whom, y de which como se verá en los exemplos siguientes:

My friend that (6 who) died yesterday, and that (6 whom) I loved a quien yo amaba tan tiernaso dearly.

GRAMATICA INGLESA.

Your dog that (6 which) ran away, | El perro de vmd. que se escapó, and that (o which) I found afterward.

y que encontré despues.

A that usado como relativo nunca puede preceder una preposicion, y se erraria si se dixéra:

> The friend of that I speak. The dog to that I call.

Lo que suele hacerse en semejante caso es poner la preposicion al fin de la clausula; como:

> The friend that I speak of. The dog that I call to.

O mudando el relativo:

The friend of whom I speak. The dog to which I call.

En Ingles muchas veces se omiten los pronombres relativos, como se verá en los exemplos siguientes:

You say he is not come.

It is the man you have seen here.

aguí. It is the portrait I have shown you.

Vmd. dice que no ha venido. Es el hombre que vmd. ha visto

Es el retrato que le he enseñado.

CAPÍTULO IX.

DE LOS PRONOMBRES INTERROGATIVOS.

WHO, whom, y. whose, usados como interrogativos, significan quien, á quien, de quien, 6 cuyo, cuya, &c.

EXEMPLOS.

Who is that? Whom do you love? Of whom do you speak? Whose house is that?

Quien es cse? A quien ama vmd.? De quien habla vmd.? De quien 6 cuya es esa casa?

Which corresponde à qual, quales; como:

Which of the two will you have? | Qual de los dos quiere vmd. 6 desea vmd.?

To which do you give the preference?

A qual da vmd. la preferencia?

Which como pronombre interrogativo puede referirse á personas y á cosas inanimadas; como:

Which of these four gentlemen | A qual de estos quatro caballeros did you speak to? Which of these two pictures do habló vmd.? Qual de estas dos pinturas prefiere vmd.?

What se traduce comunmente por qué.

EXEMPLOS.

What do you think of? What are you laughing at? What do you say? What is the matter there? What gentleman is that?

you like best?

En qué piensa vmd.? De qué se rie vmd.? Qué dice vmd.? Qué viene à ser eso? Qué caballero es ese?

What pucke tambien exprimirse algunas veces por qual, quales.

EXEMPLOS.

What is your opinion? What are his expectations?

Qual es la opinion de vmd.? Quales son sus esperanzas?

CAPÍTULO X.

DE ALGUNOS PRONOMBRES INDEFINIDOS.

1. EL pronombre indefinido one se pone despues de un adjetivo para evitar la repeticion del nombre; como:

a black one, or a white one?

What sort of hat will you have, | Qué género de sombrero quiere vmd., negro 6 blanco?

One forma su plural en ones quando se usa en lugar de un nombre; cómo:

These handkerchiefs are hand- | Estos panuelos son bonitos; quasome; which do you like best, the red ones, or the white ones?

les le gustan à vmd. mas, los encarnados ó los blancos?

One y ones se ponen tambien despues del adjetivo little, quando se refieren á personas, y despues de young, quando esta voz se retiere á animales.

EXEMPLOS.

How does your little one do? What! my two little ones! The lioness has but one young one at a time.

Como está el niño de vmd.? Qué! mis dos niños! La leona solo pare un cachorrillo á la vez.

Are there eggs or young ones in | Hay huevos o paxarillos en esc nido? that nest?

2. Cada uno, todos se exprimen, en Ingles, por every one 6 every body.

EXEMPLOS.

Every one ought to march to de- | Cada uno debe marchar para la defend his country.

Every body knows it.

fensa de la patria. Todos lo saben.

Cada uno debe traducirse por each, quando se habla solamente de dos personas o cosas; como:

to each.

There are two boys, give a penny Allá van dos muchachos, dé vmd. un penique á cada uno.

3. Alguno se expresa, en Ingles, con frequencia por some one, y otras veces por somebody: la diferencia que hay entre estas dos voces es que la primera se emplea indistintamente con las cosas y personas, y la segunda se usa solamente con las personas.

EXEMPLOS.

Somebody has been there.

Alguno ha estado allí.

Algunos se expresa tambien por some quando se refiere á personas o cosas, y por some people, some folks, some men, quando se refiere solamente á personas.

EXEMPLOS.

Give him some.

Some people

Some folks Some men

Dele vmd. algunos 6 algunas.

Otro se expresa por other.

EXEMPLOS.

Some are better than others. One is as good as the other.

Los unos son mejores que los otros. El uno es tan bueno como el otro.

Todo, usado en sentido absoluto, se exprime igualmente por all 6 every thing.

♥OL. I.

CAPÍTULO XII.

DE LOS TIEMPOS.

EL presente se usa comunmente en lugar del futuro despues de las voces if, si; when, quando; after, despues; before, antes; as soon as, así que; y despues de algunas otras.

EXEMPLO.

When he comes, I will tell it him. | Quando venga, se lo diré.

Algunas veces se usa del presente en lugar del futuro, sin emplear las partículas de que acabamos de hablar; como:

That vessel sails next week.

Ese buque se hará á la vela la semana próxima.

Este modo de hablar es particular á las acciones cuyo tiempo ha sido ántes determinado, pero si se hablare de una accion ó acontecimiento cuya época no es todavía determinada, se empleará el futuro como sucede en Castellano.

EXEMPLO.

It is supposed that this vessel will Se cree que este buque se hará à sail next week.

En Castellano se emplea muchas veces el verbo estar, to be, en el presente quando está seguido de un adjetivo, adverbio, 6 participio; pero en Ingles requiere el imperfecto ó el pretérito perfecto.

EXEMPLOS.

He has been sick this year past. He has been here six months.

Hace un año que está enfermo. Hace seis años que está aquí.

El participio presente se usa con el verbó to be para expresar una accion que se executa al tiempo en que se habla; como:

He is writing.
He is going to the play.

Está escribiendo. Va à la comedia.

El pretérito imperfecto explica como presente la significacion del verbo, respecto de otra cosa ya pasada.

EXEMPLO.

She was talking when he entered. | Ella estaba hablando quando él entré.

I was thinking of it last night.

Yo pensaba en ello la noche pa-

Tambien se usa de él para expresar una accion enteramente pasada. EXEMPLOS.

I saw your countryman yesterday. | Yo ví ayer á su paisano.

El pretérito perfecto expresa ya pasada la accion significada por el verbo, y tambien hace alguna alusion al tiempo presente.

EXEMPLOS.

I have bought a great deal of wine | He comprado mucho vino este anothis year.

I have seen your brother this week.

He visto a su hermano esta se-

Quando se habla de una accion pasada, sin expresar el tiempo en que pasó, ha de usarse tambien del pretérito perfecto; como:

I have drunk a great deal. I have travelled a great deal.

He bebido mucho.

He viajado mucho.

El futuro se emplea con muy poca diferencia, como en Castellano.

CAPITULO XIII.

DEL SUBJUNTIVO.

SUBJUNTIVO es un modo que necesita otro verbo antecedente expreso ó suplido, á que se junta, para tener entera y completa su significacion. Las conjunciones unless, à ménos que; if, si; though, aunque; whether, si, sea que; lest, de miedo que, &c. están generalmente seguidas del subjuntivo.

EXEMPLOS.

He will be punished unless he repent.

He will lose his fortune if he be found guilty.

Though he come this afternoon, he shall not be paid.

Será castigado á ménos que se arrepienta.

Perderá su caudal si le hallan culpable.

Aunque venga esta tarde, no le pagarán.

El verbo se usa en el indicativo despues de dichas conjunciones, quando el verbo antecedente no expresa duda.

EXEMPLOS.

Though he is found guilty, he will | Aunque le han juzgado culpable, le be released.

libertarán.

Though he is here, he shall not be

Aunque está aquí, no le pagarán.

Los verbos Españoles que significan querer, desear, pedir, temer, recelar, alegrarse, y lo que pertenece á la voluntad, rigen el segundo verbo al subjuntivo; pero en Ingles muy corto número le requiere; como:

I wish she may be happy. I should wish that he might come. She desires that he may go.

Desco que sea feliz. Quisiera que viniese. Desca que vaya.

Los demas rigen al segundo verbo en el indicativo.

EXEMPLOS.

I doubt whether he will write. I am surprised that he is gone. They are afraid that he will die. They do not know that that is true. Do you believe that he has written? | Cree vmd. que haya escrito?

Dudo que escriba. Me sorprehende que se haya ida. Temen que muera. Ignoran que eso sea verdad.

Hay algunos verbos impersonales, en Castellano, que están siempre seguidos de que y del subjuntivo: en Ingles, algunos rigen al segundo verbo en infinitivo, y otros requieren despues de ellos el signo should; véanse los exemplos siguientes.

You must be mad. It is necessary that you should Es fireciso que vmd. esté loco. Importa mucho que vmd. le escriba.

It is proper that you should be punished.

Conviene que vmd. sea castigado.

It is impossible that she should do it. | Es imposible que ella lo haga.

CAPÍTULO XIV.

DEL INFINITIVO.

TO, que designa el infinitivo en Ingles, se omite ántes de los verbos precedidos de so behold, ver; to bid, mandar; to dare, atreverse; to feel, sentir; to have, haber; to let, permitir; to make, hacer; to need, necesitar; to see, ver; to smell, oler; to hear, oir.

EXEMPLOS.

Let him go. I make her write.

Permitale vmd. de ir. Yo la hago escribir.

Quando un verbo se usa con algun otro signo, nunca se debe usar de to.

EXEMPLOS.

I do write. She did sing. We shall come. You should come. Ella cantaba. Ella cantaba. Nosotros vendrémos.

La preposicion para 6 por se suprime comunmente, en Ingles, antes del infinitivo; como: ' ed by the men, and to be hated by the women.

She is handsome enough to be lov- | Es bastante bonita para ser amada. de los hombres y fiara ser aborrecida de las mugeres.

Esta misma preposicion antes del verbo haber se exprime, en Ingles, por for seguido del participio presente.

EXEMPLO.

He was condemned for having | Fué condenado for haber robado robbed upon the high-way. | en el camino real.

El infinitivo empleado, en Castellano, como nombre substantivo, puede expresarse, en Ingles, ó por el infinitivo ó por el participio presente.

EXEMPLO.

To be rich and to be good are very Being rich and being good are muy distintas. very different.

Ser rico y ser bueno son cosas

Las preposiciones que siguen gobiernan, en Castellano, el infinitivo, y, en Ingles, rigen el participio presente:

> By writing. After having. Without saying. For fear of losing. In place of going. Far from knowing.

Por escribir. Despues de haber. Sin decir. Léjos de conocer.

Quando varios infinitivos ó participios de presente se siguen unos á otros, la preposicion debe ponerse solamente antes del primero.

EXEMPLO.

Without speaking, drinking, or cat- | Sin hablar, sin beber, 6 sin coing.

CAPÍTULO XV.

DEL ADVERBIO, DE LA PREPOSICION, Y DE LA CONJUNCION.

QUANDO se emplea el adverbio con adjetivos, se pone comunmente ántes de ellos.

EXEMPLOS.

I am very happy. You are extremely good. It is uncommonly hot.

Yo soy muy dichoso. Vmd. es muy bueno. Hace un calor extraordinario.

En Ingles los adverbios de lugar se colocan generalmente despues del verbo.

EXEMPLOS.

I go there. He was below. She comes from there.

Yo voy allá. Estaba abaxo. Viene de allá.

El adverbio se usa muchas veces como nombre substantivo.

EXEMPLOS.

The inside is fine. The outside is not so fine.

La parte de adentro es hermosa. La parte exterior no es tan hermosa.

Los adverbios always, already, ever, never, often, scarce, seldon, 'soon, still, then, se colocan generalmente antes de los verbos.

EXEMPLOS.

I never was in Turkey. I often told him my sentiments. Jamas he estado en Turquía. Muchas veces le dixe mi modo de pensar.

Dichos adverbios deben colocarse despues de los verbos auxiliares.

EXEMPLOS.

I have often told him my senti- | Le he dicho muchas veces mi mo ments.

do de pensar.

I have been extremely pleased.

He tenido muchisimo gusto.

 ${\mathcal M}$ solo se pone antes de un substantivo, δ de un substantivo precedido de un adjetivo.

EXEMPLOS.

I have no paper. I have no good paper. No tengo papel.
No tengo buen papel.

Quando al adjetivo no sigue un nombre substantivo se emplea not; como:

It is not good,

No es bueno.

Tambien se usa de esta negacion quando hay un artículo entre ella y el adjetivo.

EXEMPLO.

That is not a good horse.

Aquel no es un buen caballo.

El adverbio no se emplea quando se responde á una pregunta sin expresar verbo, como:

Will you drink? no.

Quiere vmd. beber? no.

Pero si hay verbo en la respuesta, la negacion no se exprime en Ingles por not.

EXEMPLO.

Will you go with me? I will not. | Quiere vmd. venir conmigo? no quiero.

DE LA PREPOSICION.

La preposicion de se exprime en Ingles por from, with, by, \u03a of. Se usa de from, quando el verbo que precede, \u03b6 la sentencia, expresa separacion, distancia, \u03b6 el movimiento de un lugar \u03a otro, y quando significa duracion de tiempo.

EXEMPLOS.

I am separated from you.

He lives far from here.

It is ninety miles from here to New-York.

He comes from England.

She is fallen from riches to misery.

Vol. 1.

Estoy separado de vmd.
Vive léjos de aquí.
Hay noventa millas de aquí á Nueva-York.
Viene de Inglaterra.
Pasó de la opulencia á la miseria.

3 R

morning till midnight.

He worked from six o'clock in the | Trabajaba desde las seis de la manana hasta media noche.

Quando un verbo pasivo está seguido de la preposicion de, y de un substantivo ó pronombre que sea la persona que hace, la dicha preposicion se exprime, en Ingles, por by.

EXEMPLOS. '

She is loved by her father. They are esteemed by every body. Son estimados de todos.

Es amada de su padre.

En las frases de arriba los agentes son las voces padre, todos, como puede verse volviendo en activo el pasivo; como su padre la ama, todos los estiman.

Pero si el substantivo ó pronombre que sigue al verbo y á la preposicion, denota solamente el instrumento, ó, la causa segundaria de la accion del verbo, la preposicion de ha de expresarse, en Ingles, por with; como:

The barrel is filled with flour. He was loaded with favours.

El barril está lleno de harina. Estaba colmado de favores.

Comunmente se usa de of en lugar de with despues de un adjetivo; como:

The barrel is full of flour.

El barril está lleno de harina.

Quando el verbo que está seguido de la preposicion á, en Espanol, expresa el movimiento de un lugar á otro, dicha preposicion se exprime, en Ingles, por to.

EXEMPLOS.

They go to New-York. You were sent to Cadiz. He came to my house.

Van á Nueva-York. A vmd. le enviaron á Cádiz. Vino á mi casa.

Quando la preposicion de se expresa en Ingles por from, la preposicion á que sigue en la misma frase debe expresarse por to.

EXEMPLOS.

I went from Cadiz to Madrid. It is far from here to that town. Fuí de Cádiz á Madrid. Hay una gran distancia de aqui c esa ciudad.

Si el verbo de que está precedido la preposicion, no expresa movimiento de un lugar á otro, se usará de at.

EXEMPLOS.

I have assisted at the ceremony. He arrived at six o'clock. She set out at eight o'clock. He asistido á la ceremonia. Llegó á las seis. Salió á las ocho.

A seguida de un substantivo ó adjetivo expresando el modo de hacer alguna cosa, puedo traducirse por in 6 por after; como:

He dresses in 6 after the Spanish | Se viste \(\delta \) la Española. fashion.

DE LA CONJUNCION.

Hay algunas conjunciones, en Español, que están casi siempre seguidas del subjuntivo, pero, en Ingles, muy pocas rigen este modo. Nos referimos á la lista de ellas que se encuentra á la página 255 de este tomo.

valley, and a prodigious tide of wa- | ter rolling through it. The valley that thou seest, said he, is the vale of misery, and the tide of water that thou seest, is part of the great tide of eternity. What is the reason, said I, that the tide I see rises out of a thick mist at one end, and again loses itself in a thick mist at the other? What thou seest, said he, is that portion of eternity which is called Time, measured out by the sun, and reaching from the beginning of the world to its consummation.-Examine now, said he, this sea that is bounded with darkness at both ends, and tell me what thou discoverest in it. I see a bridge, said I, standing in the midst of the tide. The bridge thou seest, said he, is human life; consider it attentively. Upon a more leisurely survey of it, I found that it consisted of threescore and ten entire arches, with several broken arches, which, added to those that were entire, made up the number about a hundred. As I was counting the arches, the genius told me that this bridge consisted at first of a thousand arches; but that a great flood swept away the rest, and left the bridge in the ruinous condition I now beheld it; but tell me further, said he, what thou discoverest on it. I see multitudes of people passing over it, said I, and a black cloud hanging of each end of it. As I looked more attentively, I saw several of the passengers dropping through the bridge into the great tide that flowed underneath it: and upon further examination, perceived there were innumerable trapdoors that lay concealed in the bridge, which the passengers no sooner trod upon, but they fell through them into the tide, and immediately disappeared. These hid-the entrance of the bridge, so that throngs of people no sooner broke through the cloud, but many of them fell into them. They grew thinner towards the middle, but multiplied and lay closer together towards the end of the arches that were entire.

There were indeed some persons, but their number was very small, that continued a kind of hobbling march on the broken arches, but fell through one after another, being quite tired and spent with so long a walk.

I passed some time in the contemplation of this wonderful structure, and the great variety of objects which it presented. My heart was filled with a deep melancholy to see several dropping unexpectedly in the midst of mirth and jollity, and catching at every thing that stood by them to save themselves. Some were looking up towards the heavens in a thoughtful posture, and in the midst of a speculation stumbled and fell out of sight. Multitudes were very busy in the pursuit of bubbles that glittered in their eyes and danced before them; but often when they thought themselves within the reach of them, their footing failed, and down they sunk. In this confusion of objects, I observed some with scimitars in their hands, and others with urinals, who ran to and fro upon the bridge, thrusting several persons on trap-doors which did not seem to lie in their way, and which they might have escaped had birds that are perpetually hovering about the bridge, and settling upon it from time to time? I see vultures, harpies, ravens, cormorants, and among many other feathered creatures, several little winged boys, that perch in great numbers upon the middle arches. These, said the genius, are envy, avarice, superstition, despair, love, with the like cares and passions that infest human life.

I here fetched a deep sigh: Alas, said I, man was made in vain! how is he given away to misery and mortality! tortured in life, and swallowed up in death! The genius, being moved with compassion towards me, bid me quit so uncomfortable a prospect. Look no more, said he, on man in the first stage of his existence, in his setting out for eternity; but cast thine eye on that thick mist into which the tide bears the several generations of mortals that fall into it. I directed my sight as I was ordered, and (whether or no the good genius strengthened it with any supernatural force, or dissipated part of the mist that was before too thick for the eye to penetrate) I saw the valley opening at the further end, and spreading forth into an immense ocean, that had a huge rock of adamant running through the midst of it, and dividing it into two equal parts. clouds still rested on one half of it, insomuch that I could discover nothing in it; but the other appeared to me a vast ocean planted with innumerable islands, that were covered with fruits and flowers, and interwoven with a thousand little shining seas that ran among them. I could see persons dressed in glorious habits with garlands upon their heads, mean, said I, those great flights of I down by the sides of fountains. or resting on beds of flowers; and could hear a confused harmony of singing birds, falling waters, human voices, and musical instruments. Gladness grew in me at the discovery of so delightful a scene. I wished for the wings of an eagle, that I might fly away to those happy seats: but the genius told me there was no passage to them, except through the gates of death that I saw opening every moment upon the bridge. The islands, said he, that lie so fresh and green before thee, and with which the whole face of the ocean appears spotted as far as thou canst see, are more in number than the sand on the sea shore; there are myriads of islands behind those which thou here discoverest, reaching further than thine eye, or even thine imagination can extend itself. These are the mansions of good men after death, who, according to the degree and kinds of virtue in which they excelled, are distributed among the several islands, which abound with pleasures of different kinds and degrees, suitable to the relishes and perfections of those who are settled in them; every island is a paradise accommodated to its respective inhabitants. Are not these, O Mirza, habitations worth contending for? Does life appear miserable, that gives thee opportunities of earning such a reward? death to be feared that will convey thee to so happy an existence? Think not man was made in vain, who has such an eternity reserved for him. I gazed with inexpressible pleasure on these happy islands. At length, said I, Show me now, I beseech thee, the secrets that lie hid under those dark clouds, which cover the ocean on the other side of passing among the trees, lying the rock of adamant. The genius making me no answer, I turned | vessels, and more by the folly, perabout to address' myself to him a second time, but I found that he had left me; I then turned again to the vision which I had been so long contemplating; but instead of the rolling tide, the arched bridge and the happy islands, I saw nothing but the long hollow valley of Bagdat, with oxen, sheep, and camels grazing upon the sides of it.

The Voyage of Life; an Allegory.

"Life," says Seneca, "is a vovage, in the progress of which we are perpetually changing our scenes: we first leave childhood behind us, then youth, then the years of ripened manhood, then the better or more pleasing part of old age."-The perusal of this passage having excited in me a train of reflections on the state of man, the incessant fluctuation of his wishes, the gradual change of his disposition to all external objects, and the thoughtlessness with which he floats along the stream of time, I sunk into a slumber amidst my meditations, and, on a sudden, found my ears filled with the tumult of labour, the shouts of alacrity, the shricks of alarm, the whistle of winds, and the dash of waters.

My astonishment for a time repressed my curiosity; but soon recovering myself so far as to inquire whither we were going, and what was the cause of such clamour and confusion; I was told, that they were launching out into the ocean of life; that we had already passed the streights of infancy, in which multitudes had perished, some by the weakness and fragility of their verseness, or negligence, of those who undertook to steer them; and that we were now on the main sea, abandoned to the winds and billows. without any other means of security than the care of the pilot, whom it was always in our power to choose among great numbers that offered their directions and assistance.

I then looked round with anxious eagerness; and first turning my eyes behind me, saw a stream flowing through flowery islands, which every one that sailed along seemed to behold with pleasure; but no sooner touched, than the current, which, though not noisy or turbulent, was yet irresistible, bore him away. Beyond these islands all was darkness, nor could any of the passengers describe the shore at which he first embarked.

Before me, and on either side, was an expanse of waters violently agitated, and covered with so thick a mist, that the most perspicacious eye could see but a little way. It appeared to be full of rocks and whirlpools, for many sunk unexpectedly while they were courting the gale with full sails, and insulting those whom they had left behind. So numerous, indeed were the dangers, and so thick the darkness, that no caution could confer security. Yet there were many, who, by false intelligence, betrayed their followers into whirlpools, or by violence pushed those whom they found in their way against the rocks.

The current was invariable and insurmountable; but though it was impossible to sail against it, or to return to the place that was once passed, yet it was not so violent as to allow no opportunities for dexterity or courage, since, though none could retreat back from danger, ye:

they might often avoid it, by oblique direction.

It was, however, not very common to steer with much care or prudence; for, by some universal infatuation, every man appeared to think himself safe, though he saw his consorts every moment sinking round him; and no sooner had the waves closed over them, than their fate and their misconduct were forgotten; the voyage was pursued with the same jocund confidence; every man congratulated himself upon the soundness of his vessel, and believed himself able to stem the whirlpool in which his friend was swallowed, or glide over the rocks on which he was dashed: nor was it often observed that the sight of a wreck made any man change his course: if he turned aside for a moment, he soon forgot the rudder, and left himself again to the disposal of chance.

This negligence did not proceed from indifference or from weariness of their present condition; for not one of those who thus rushed upon destruction, failed, when he was sinking, to call loudly upon his associates for that help which could not now be given him; and many spent their last moments in cautioning others against the folly by which they were intercepted in the midst of their Their benevolence was sometimes praised, but their admonitions were unregarded.

The vessels in which we had embarked being confessedly unequal to the turbulence of the stream of life, were visibly impaired in the course of the voyage; so that every passenger was certain, that how long soever he might, by favourable accidents, or by incessant vigilance. be preserved, he must sink at last.

have been expected to sadden the gay, and intimidate the daring, at least to keep the melancholy and timorous in perpetual torments, and hinder them from any enjoyment of the varieties and gratifications which nature offered them as the solace of their labours; yet in effect none seemed less to expect destruction than those to whom it was most dreadful; they all had the art of concealing their danger from themselves; and those who knew their inability to bear the sight of the terrors that embarrassed their way, took care never to look forward, but found some amusement for the present moment, and generally entertained themselves by playing with Hope, who was the constant associate of the voyage of life.

Yet all that Hope ventured to promise, even to those whom she favoured most, was, not that they should escape, but that they should sink last; and with this promise every one was satisfied, though he laughed at the rest for seeming to believe it. Hope, indeed, apparently mocked the credulity of her companions; for, in proportion as their vessels grew leaky, she redoubled her assurances of safety; and none were more busy in making provisions for a long voyage, than they whom all but themselves saw likely to perish soon by irreparable decay.

In the midst of the current of life was the gulf of Intemperance. a Areadful whirlpool, interspersed with rocks, of which the pointed . crags were concealed under water. and the tops covered with herbage, on which Ease spread couches of repose, and with shades, where Pleasure warbled the song of invitation. Within sight of these rocks. all who sailed on the ocean of life This necessity of perishing might | must necessarily pass. Reason indeed was always at hand to steer ! the passengers through a narrow outlet, by which they might escape, but very few could, by her entreaties or remonstrances, be induced to put the rudder into her hand, without stipulating that she should approach so near unto the rocks of Pleasure, that they might solace themselves with a short enjoyment of that delicious region, after which they always determined to pursue their course without any other deviation.

Reason was too often prevailed upon so far by these promises, as to venture her charge within the eddy of the gulph of Intemperance, where indeed the circumvolution was weak, but yet interrupted the course of the vessel, and drew it, by insensible rotations, towards the centre. She then repented her temerity, and with all her force endeavoured to retreat; but the draught of the gulph was generally too strong to be overcome; and the passenger, having danced in circles with a pleasing and giddy velocity, was at last overwhelmed and lost. Those few whom reason was able to extricate, generally suffered so many shocks upon the points which shot out from the rocks of Pleasure, that they were unable to continue their course with the same strength and facility as before, but floated along timorously and feebly, endangered by every breeze, and shattered by every ruffle of the water, till • they sunk, by slow degrees, after long struggles, and innumerable expedients, always repining at their own folly, and warning others against the first approach of the gulph of Intemperance.

There were artists who professed to repair the breaches and stop been shattered on the rocks of Pleasure. Many appeared to have great confidence in their skill, and some, indeed, were preserved by it from sinking, who had received only a single blow; but I remarked that few vessels lasted long which had been much repaired, nor was it found that the artists themselves continued affoat longer than those who had least of their assistance.

The only advantage which, in the voyage of life, the cautious had above the negligent, was, that thev sunk later and more suddenly; for they passed forward till they had sometimes seen all those in whose company they had issued from the streights of infancy, perish in the way, and at last were overset by a cross breeze, without the toil of resistance, or the anguish of expectation. But such as had often fallen against the rocks of Pleasure, commonly subsided by sensible degrees, contended long with the encroaching waters, and harrassed themselves by labours that scarce Hope herself could flatter with suc-

As I was looking upon the various fate of the multitude about me. I was suddenly alarmed with an admonition from some unknown nower, "Gaze not idly upon others when thou thyself art sinking.-Whence is this thoughtless tranquillity, when thou and they are equally endangered?" I looked, and seeing the gulph of Intemperance before me, started and awaked.

Obidah, the son of Abensua, left the leaks of the vessels which had the caravansera early in the morning.

the plains of Indostan. He was fresh and vigorous with rest; he was animated with hope; he was incited by desire; he walked swiftly forward over the vallies, and saw the hills gradually rising before him. As he passed along, his ears were delighted with the morning song of the bird of paradise, he was fanned by the last flutters of the sinking breeze, and sprinkled with the dew by groves of spices; be sometimes contemplated the towering height of the oak, monarch of the hills; and sometimes caught the gentle fragrance of the primrose, eldest daughter of the spring: all his senses were gratified, and all care was banished from his heart.

Thus he went on till the sun approached his meridian, and the increasing heat preyed upon his strength; he then looked round about him for some more commodious path. He saw, on his right hand, a grove that seemed to wave its shades as a sign of invitation; he entered it, and found the coolness and verdure irresistibly plcasant. He did not, however, forget whither he was travelling, but found a narrow way bordered with flowers, which appeared to have the same direction with the main road, and was pleased that, by this happy experiment, he had found means to unite pleasure with business, and to gain the rewards of diligence without suffering its fatigues. He, therefore, still continued to walk for a time, without the least remission of his ardour, except that he was sometimes tempted to stop by the music of the birds, which the heat had assembled in the shade, and sometimes amused himself with plucking the flowers that covered the quick and painful remembrance of banks on either side, or the fruits his folly; he now saw how happiand pursued his journey through that hung upon the branches. At last the green path began to decline from its first tendency, and to wind among hills and thickets, cooled with fountains, and murmuring with water-falls. Obidah paused for a time, and began to consider whether it were longer safe to forsake the known and common track; but remembering that the heat was now in its greatest violence, and that the plain was dusty and uneven, he resolved to pursue the new path, which he supposed only to make a few meanders, in compliance with the varieties of the ground, and to end at last in the common road.

Having thus calmed his solicitude, he renewed his pace, though he suspected that he was not gaining ground. This uneasiness of his mind inclined him to lay hold on every new object, and give way to every sensation that might soothe or divert him. He listened to every echo, he mounted every hill for a fresh prospect, he turned aside to every cascade, and pleased himself with tracing the course of a gentle river that rolled among the trees, and watered a large region with innumerable circumvolutions. In these amusements the hours passed away uncounted, his deviations had perplexed his memory, and he knew not towards what point to travel. He stood pensive and confused, afraid to go forward lest he should go wrong, yet conscious that the time of loitering was now past. While he was thus tortured with uncertainty, the sky was overspread with clouds, the day vanished from before him, and a sudden tempest gathered round his head. He was now roused by his danger to a quick and painful remembrance of ed; he lamented the unmanly impatience that prompted him to seek shelter in the grove, and despised the petty curiosity that led him on from trifle to trifle. While he was thus reflecting, the air grew blacker, and a clap of thunder broke his meditation.

He now resolved to do what remained yet in his power, to tread back the ground which he had passed, and try to find some issue where the wood might open into the plain. He prostrated himself on the ground, and commended his life to the Lord of nature. He rose with confidence and tranquillity, and pressed on with his sabre in his hand, for the beasts of the desert were in motion, and on every hand were heard the mingled howls of rage and fear, and ravage and expiration; all the horrors of darkness and solitude surrounded him: the winds roared in the woods, and the torrests tumbled from the hills.

Work'd into sudden rage by wintry show'rs, Down the steep hill the roaring torrent pours ; The mountain shepherd hears the distant noise.

Thus forlorn and distressed, he wandered through the wild, without knowing whither he was going, or whether he was every moment drawing nearer to safety or destruction. At length not fear but labour began to bvercome him; his breath grew short, and his knees trembled, and he was on the point of lying down in resignation to his fate, when he beheld through the brambles the glimmer of a taper. He advanced towards the light, and finding that it pro-ness is lost when case is consult- mit, he called humbly at the door, and obtained admission. The old man set before him such provisions as he had collected for himself, on which Obidah fed with eagerness and gratitude.

When the repast was over, 'Tell me, said the hermit, by what chance thou hast been brought hither; I have been now twenty years an inhabitant of the wilderness, in which I never saw a man before.' Obidah then related the occurrences of his journey, without any concealment or palliation.

. 'Son, said the hermit, let the errors and follies, the dangers and escape of this day, sink deep into thy heart. Remember, my son, that human life is the journey of a day. We rise in the morning of youth, full of vigour and full of expectation; we set forward with spirit and hope, with gaiety and with diligence, and travel on awhile in the straight road of piety towards the mansions of rest. In a short time we remit our fervor, and endeavour to find some mitigation of our duty, and some more easy means of obtaining the same end. We then relax our vigour, and resolve no longer to be terrified with crimes at a distance, but rely upon our own constancy, and venture to approach what we resolve never to touch. We thus enter the bowers of ease, and repose in the shades of security. Here the heart softens and vigilance subsides; we are then willing to enquire whether another advance may not be made, and whether we may not, at least, turn our eyes upon the gardens of pleasure. We approach them with scruple and hesitation; we enter them, but enter timorous and trembling, and always hope to pass through them without losing the road of virtue. ceeded from the cottage of a her- which we, for awhile, keep in our

We then look back upon our lives with horror, with sorrow, with repentance; and wish, but too often vainly wish, that we had not forsaken the ways of virtue. Happy are they, my son, who shall learn from thy example not to despair, but shall remember, though the day is past, and their strength is wasted, there yet remains one effort to be made; that reformation is never hopeless, nor sincere endeavours ever unassisted, that the wanderer may at length return after all his errors, and that he who implores strength and courage from above, shall find danger and difficulty give way before him. Go now, my son, to thy repose, commit thyself to the care of Omnipotence, and when the morning calls again to toil, begin anew thy journey and thy life.'

Rambler.

The Present Life to be considered only as it may conduce to the hanpiness of a future one.

A lewd young fellow seeing an aged hermit go by him barefoot, ment, and enjoined to pursue our very miserable condition if there is not another world." " True, son," said the hermit, " but what is thy condition if there is?"—Man is a creature designed for two different states of being, or rather, for two different lives. His first life is short and transient; his second, permanent and lasting. The question we are all concerned in is this. in which of those two lives is it our interest to make ourselves happy? or, in other words, whether we should endeavour to secure to ourselves the pleasures and gratifications of a life which is uncertain and precarious, and at its utmost length of a very inconsiderable duration; or to secure to ourselves the pleasures of a life that is fixed and settled, and will never end? Every man, upon the first hearing of this question, knows very well which side of it he ought to close with. But however right we are in theory, it is plain that in practice we adhere to the wrong side of the question. We make provisions for this life as though it were never to have an end, and for the other life as though it were never to have a beginning.

Should a spirit of superior rank, who is a stranger to human nature. accidentally alight upon the earth, and take a survey of its inhabitants; what would his notions of us be? Would not he think that we were a species of beings made for quite different ends and purposes than what we really are? Must not he imagine that we are placed in this world to get riches and honours? Would not he think that it was our duty to toil after wealth, and station, and title? Nay, would not he believe we were forbidden poverty by threats of eternal punish-"Father," says he, "you are in a pleasures under pain of damnation? He would certainly imagine that we were influenced by a scheme of duties quite opposite to those which are indeed prescribed to us. And truly, according to such an imagination, he must conclude that we are a species of the most obedient creatures in the universe; that we are constant to our duty; and that we keep a steady eye on the end for which we were sent hither.

But how great would be his astonishment, when he learnt that we were beings not designed to exist in this world above threescore and ten years; and that the greatest part of this busy species shall fall short even of that age? How would he be lost in horror and adinitiation, when he should know that this set of creatures, who lay out all their endeavours for this life which scarce deserves the name of existence; when, I say, he should know that this set of creatures are to exist to all eternity in another life, for which they make no preparations? Nothing can be a greater disgrace to reuson than that men, who are persuaded of these two different states of being, should be perpetually employed in providing for a life of threescore and ten years, and neglecting to make provision for that, which, after many myriads of years, will be still new and still beginning; especially when we consider that our endeavours for making ourselves great, or rich, or honourable, or whatever else we place our happiness in, may, after all, prove unsuccessful; whereas, if we constantly and sincerely endeavour to make ourselves happy in the other ·life, we are sure that our endeavors will succeed, and that we shall not be disappointed of our hope.

The following question is started by one of the schoolmen. Supposing the whole body of earth were a great ball or mass of the finest sand, and that a single grain or particle of this sand should be annihilated every thousand years: supposing then that you had it in your choice to be happy all the while this prodigious mass of sand was consuming by this slow method till there was not a grain of it left, on condition you were to be miserable for ever after; or supposing that you might be happy for ever after, on condition you would be miserable till the whole mass of sand were thus annihilated at the rate of one sand in a thousand years: which of these two cases would you make your choice?

It must be confessed in this case, so many thousands of years are to the imagination as a kind of eternity, though in reality they do not bear so great a proportion to that duration which is to follow them, as a unit does to the greatest number which you can put together in figures, or as one of those sands to the supposed heap. Reason therefore tells us, without any manner of hesitation, which would be the better part in this choice. However, as I have before intimated, our reason might in such a case be so overset by the imagination, as to dispose some persons to sink under the consideration of the great length of the first part of this duration, and of the great distance of that second duration, which is to succeed it. The mind, I say, might give itself up to that happiness which is at hand, considering that it was so very near, and that it would last so very long. But when the choice we actually have before us, is this, whether we will choose to be happy for the space of threescore and ten, nay, perhaps, of only twenty or ten years, I might say of only a day or an hour, and miserable to all eternity; or, on the contrary, miserable for this short term of years, and happy for a whole eternity; what words are sufficient to express that folly and want of consideration which in such a case makes a wrong choice?

I here put the case even at the worst, by supposing (what seldom happens) that a course of virtue makes us miserable in this life; but if we suppose (as it generally happens) that virtue will make us more happy even in this life than a contrary course of vice, how can we sufficiently admire the stupidity or madness of those persons who are capable of making so absurd a choice?

Every wise man, therefore, will consider this life only as it may conduce to the happiness of the other, and chearfully sacrifice the pleasures of a few years to those of an eternity.

The Advantages of a Good Education.

I consider a human soul without education like marble in the quarry, which shows none of its inherent beauties, until the skill of the polisher fetches out the colours, makes the surface shine, and discovers every ornamental cloud, spot, and vein, that runs through the body of it. Education, after the same manner, when it works upon a noble mind, draws out to view every latent virtue and perfection, which without such helps are never able to make their appearance.

If my reader will give me leave to change the allusion so soon upon him, I shall make use of the same instance to illustrate the force of education, which Aristotle has brought to explain his doctrine of substantial forms, when he tells us that a statue lies hid in a block of marble; and that the art of the statuary only clears away the superfluous matter, and removes the rubbish. The figure is in the stone, and the sculptor only finds it. What sculpture is to a block of marble, education is to a human soul. The philosopher, the saint, or the hero, the wise, the good, or the great man, very often lie hid and concealed in a plebeian, which a proper education might have disinterred and have brought to light. I am therefore much delighted with reading the accounts of savage nations, and with contemplating those virtues which are wild and uncultivated; to see courage 'exerting itself in fierceness, resolution in obstinacy, wisdom in cunning, patience in sullenness and despair.

Men's passions operate variously, and appear in different kinds of action, according as they are more or less rectified and swayed by reason. When one hears of negroes, who upon the death of their masters, or upon changing their service, hang themselves upon the next tree, as it frequently happens in our American plantations, who can forbear admiring their fidelity, though it expresses itself in so dreadful a manner? What might not that savage greatness of soul which appears in these poor wretches on many occasions, be raised to, where it rightly cultivated? And what colour of excuse can there be for the contempt with which we treat this part of our species; that we should not put | allows the mind to indulge parenthem upon the common foot of humanity, that we should only set an insignificant fine upon the man who murders them; nay, that we should as much as in us lies cut them off from the prospects of happiness in another world, as well as in this, and deny them that which we look upon as the proper means for attaining it?

It is therefore an unspeakable blessing to be born in those parts of the world where wisdom and knowledge flourish; though it must be confessed there are, even in these parts, several poor uninstructed persons, who are but little above the inhabitants of those nations of which I have been here speaking; as those who have had the advantages of a more liberal education, rise above one another by several different degrees of perfection.-For to return to our statue in the block of marble, we see it sometimes only begun to be chipped, sometimes rough-hewn, and but just sketched into a human figure; sometimes we see the man appearing distinctly in all his limbs and features, sometimes we find the figure wrought up to a great elegancy, but seldom meet with any to which the hand of a Phidias or Praxiteles could not give several nice touches and finishings.

The Disadvantages of a Bad Education.

Sir, I was condemned by some disastrous influence to be an only son, born to the apparent prospect tal affection with greater intense-My birth was celebrated by the tenants with feasts, and dances, and bag-pipes; congratulations were sent from every family within ten miles round; and my parents discovered in my first cries such tokens of future virtue and understanding, that they declared themselves determined to devote the remaining part of life to my happiness and the increase of their

The abilities of my father and mother were not perceptibly unequal, and education had given neither much advantage over the other. They had both kept good company, rattled in chariots, glittered in playhouses, and danced at court, and were both expert in the games that were in their times called in as auxiliaries against the intrusion of thought.

When there is such a parity between two persons associated for life, the dejection which the husband, if he be not completely stupid, must always suffer for want of superiority, sinks him to submissiveness. My mamma therefore governed the family without controul; and except that my father still retained some authority in the stables, and now and then, after a supernumerary bottle, broke a looking-glass or china-dish to prove his sovereignty, the whole course of the year was regulated by her direction, the servants received from her all their orders, and the tenants were continued or dismissed at her discretion.

She therefore thought herself entitled to the superintendance of her son's education; and when my of a large fortune, and allotted to father, at the instigation of the parmy parents at that time of life son, faintly proposed that I should when satiety of common diversions | be sent to school, very positively told him, that she would not suffer ! so fine a child to be ruined; that she never knew any boys at a grammar-school that could come into a room without blushing, or sit at the table without some aukward uneasiness; that they were always putting themselves into danger by boisterous plays, or vitiating their behaviour with mean company; and that for her part, she would rather follow me to the grave than see me tear my clothes, and hang down my head, and sneak about with dirty shoes and blotted fingers, my hair unpowdered, and my hat uncocked.

My father, who had no other end in his proposal than to appear wise and manly, soon acquiesced, since I was not to live by my learning: for, indeed, he had known very few students that had not some stiffness in their manner. They therefore agreed, that a domestic tutor should be procured, and hired an honest gentleman of mean conversation and narrow sentiments, but who having passed the common forms of literary education, they implicitly concluded qualified to teach all that was to be learned from a scholar. He thought himself sufficiently exalted by being placed at the same table with his pupil, and had no other view than to perpetuate his felicity by the utmost flexibility of submission to all my mother's opinions and caprices. He frequently took away my book, lest I should more with too much application, charged me never to write without turning up my ruffles, and generally brushed my coat before he dismissed me into the parlour.

He had no occasion to complain of too burthensome an employment; for my mother very judiciously considered, that I was not likely to suffered me not to pass any more time in his apartment than my lesson required. When I was summoned to my task, she enjoined me not to get any of my tutor's ways, who was seldom mentioned before me but for practices to be avoided. I was every moment admonished not to lean on my chair, cross my legs, or swing my hands like my tutor; and once my mother very seriously delibe- rated upon his total dismission, because I began, she said, to learn his manner of sticking on my hat, and had his bend in my shoulders, and his totter in my gait.

Such, however, was her care that I had escaped all these depravities: and when I was only twelve years old had rid myself of every appearance of childish diffidence. I was celebrated round the country for the petulance of my remarks, and the quickness of my replies; and many a scholar five years older than myself have I dashed into confusion by the steadiness of my countenance, silenced by my readiness of repartee, and tortured with envy by the address with which I picked up a fan, presented a snuffbox, or received an empty tea-cup.

At fourteen I was completely skilled in all the niceties of dress, and I could not only enumerate all the variety of silks, and distinguish the product of a French loom, but dart my eye through a numerous company, and observe every deviation from the reigning mode. I was universally skilful in all the changes of expensive finery; but as every one, they say, has something to which he is particularly born, was eminently knowing in Brussels lace.

The next year saw me advanced to the trust and power of adjusting the ceremonial of an assembly. All received their partners from my grow politer in his company, and hand, and to me every stranger applied for introduction. My heart | One of these witlings elevated his now disdained the instructions of a tutor, who was rewarded with a small annuity for life, and left me qualified, in my own opinion, to govern myself.

In a short time I came to London, and as my father was well known among the higher classes of life, soon obtained admission to the most splendid assemblies, and most crowded card-tables. Here I found myself universally caressed and applauded: the ladies praised the fancy of my clothes, the beauty of my form, and the softness of my voice; endeavoured in every place to force themselves to my notice; and invited by a thousand oblique solicitations, my attendance to the play-house, and my salutations in the park. I was now happy to the utmost extent of my conception; I passed every morning in dress, every afternoon in visits, and every night in some select assemblies, where neither care nor knowledge were suffered to molest us.

After a few years, however, these delights became familiar, and I had leisure to look round me with more attention. I then found that my flatterers had very little power to relieve the languor of satiety, or recreate weariness, by varied amusement; and therefore endeavoured to enlarge the sphere of my pleasures, and to try what satisfaction might be found in the society of men. I will not deny the mortification with which I perceived that every man whose name I had heard mentioned with respect, received me with a kind of tenderness pearly bordering on compassion; and that those whose reputation was not well established, thought it necessary to justify their understandings, by treating me with contempt.—

crest, by asking me in a full coffeehouse the price of patches; and another whispered that he wondered Miss Frisk did not keep me that afternoon to watch her squirrel.

When I found myself thus hunted from all masculine conversation by those who were themselves barely admitted, I returned to the ladies, and resolved to dedicate my life to their service and their pleasure. But I find that I have now lost my charms. Of those with whom I entered the gay world, some are married, some have retired, and some have so much changed their opinion, that they scarcely pay any regard to my civilities, if there is any other man in the place. The new flight of beauties to whom I have made my addresses, suffer me to pay the treat, and then titter with boys. So that I now find myself welcome only to a few grave ladies, who, unacquainted with all that gives either use or dignity to life, are content to pass their hours between their bed and their cards. without esteem from the old, or reverence from the young.

I cannot but think, Mr. Rambler, that I have reason to complain; for surely the females ought to pay some regard to the age of him whose youth has passed in endeavours to please them. They that encourage folly in the boy, have no right to punish it in the man. Yet I find that though they lavish their first fondness upon pertness and gaiety, they soon transfer their regard to other qualities, and ungratefully abandon their adorers to dream out their last years in stupidity and contempt.

I am, &c. FLORENTULUS. Rambler. Omniscience and Omnitresence of their respective suns; when I still the Deity, together with the imensity of his Works.

I was yesterday about sun-set walking in the open fields, till the night insensibly fell upon me. I at first amused myself with all the richness and variety of colours, which appeared in the western parts' of heaven; in proportion as they faded away and went out, several stars and planets appeared one after another, till the whole firmament was in a glow. The blueness of the æther was exceedingly heightened and enlivened by the season of the year, and by the rays of all those luminaries that passed through it. The galaxy appeared in its most beautiful white. To complete the scene, the full moon rose at length in that clouded majesty, which Milton takes notice of, and opened to the eye a new picture of nature, which was more finely shaded and disposed among softer lights, than that which the sun had before discovered to us.

As I was surveying the moon walking in her brightness, and taking her progress among the constellations, a thought arose in me which I believe very often perplexes and disturbs men of serious and contemplative natures. David himself fell into it in that reflection, "When I consider the heavens the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man that thou regardest him!" In the same manner, when I considered that infinite host of stars, or, to speak more philosophically, of suns, which were then shining upon me, with those innumerable sets of planets or worlds, which were moving round | nation set any bounds to it?

their respective suns; when I still enlarged the idea, and supposed another heaven of suns and worlds rising still above this which we discovered, and these still enlightened by a superior firmament of luminaries, which are planted at so great a distance, that they may appear to the inhabitants of the former as the stars do to us; in short, while I pursued this thought, I could not but reflect on that little insignificant figure which I myself bore amidst the immensity of God's works.

Were the sun which enlightens this part of the creation, with all the host of planetary worlds that move about him, utterly extinguished and annihilated, they would not be missed more than a grain of sand upon the sea-shore. The space they possess is so exceedingly little in comparison of the whole, it would scarce make a blank in the creation. The chasm would be imperceptible to an eye, that could take in the whole compass of nature, and pass from one end of the creation to the other: as it is possible there may be such a sense in ourselves hereafter, or in creatures which are at present more exalted than ourselves. We see many stars by the help of glasses, which we do not discover with the naked eyes; and the finer our telescopes are, the more still are our discoveries. Huygenius carries this thought so far, that he does not think it impossible there may be stars whose light is not yet travelled down to us, since their first creation. There is no question but the universe has certain bounds set to it; but when we consider that this is the work of infinite power prompted by infinite goodness, with an infinite space to exert itself in, how can our imagicondition of an intellectual being, who feels no other effects from this his presence, but such as proceed from divine wrath and indignation!

and loving-kindness!

in our existence; but he may leave this our existence to itself, with regard to its happiness or misery. For, in this sense, he may cast us away from his presence, and take his holy spirit from us. This single consideration one would think sufficient to make us open our hearts to all those infusions of joy and gladness which are so near at hand, and ready to be poured in upon us: especially when we consider, secondly, the deplorable condition of an intellectual being who feels no other effects from his Maker's presence but such as proceed from divine wrath and indignation!

We may assure ourselves, that the great Author of Nature will not always be as one who is indifferent to any of his creatures. Those who will not feel him in his love, will be sure, at length, to feel him in his displeasure. And how dreadful is the condition of that creature who is only sensible of the being of his Creator by what he suffers from him! He is as essentially present in hell as in heaven: but the inhabitants of those accursed places behold him only in his wrath, and shrink within the flames to conceal themselves from him. It is not in the power of imagination to conceive the fearful effects of omnipotence incensed.

where about him, but of no advantage to him. It is the same thing to a man without religion as if there were no God in the world. It is indeed impossible for an infinite being to remove himself from any of his creatures; but, though he cannot withdraw his essence from us, which would argue at imperfection in him, he can withdraw from us all the joys and consolations of it. His presence may perhaps be necessary to support us.

But I shall only consider the wretchedness of an intellectual being, who, in this life, lies under the displeasure of him, that at all times, and in all places, is intimately united with him. He is able to disquiet the soul, and vex it in all its in culties. He can hinder any of the greatest comforts of life from refreshing us, and give an edge to every one of its slightest calamities. Who then can bear the thought of being an outcast from his presence.

that is, from the comforts of it, or of feeling it only in its terrors? How pathetic is that expostulation of Job, when, for the real trial of his patience, he was made to look upon himself in this deplorable condition! "Why hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that I am become a burden to myself?" But, thirdly, how happy is the condition of that intellectual being, who is sensible of his Maker's presence from the secret effects of his mercy and loving-kindness.

The blessed in heaven behold him face to face that is, are as sensible of his presence as we are of the presence of any person whom we look upon with our eyes. There is doubtless a faculty in spirits, by which they apprehend one another, as our senses do material objects; and there is no question but our souls, when they are disembodied, or placed in glorified bodies, will, by this faculty, in whatever part of space they reside, be always sensible of the divine presence. We who have this veil of flesh standing between us and the world of spirits, must be content to know the spirit of God is present with us by the effects which he produceth in us. outward senses are too gross to apprehend him; we may, however, taste and see how gracious it is, by his influence upon our minds, by those virtuous thoughts which he awakens in us, by those secret comforts and refreshments which he conveys into our souls, and by those ravishing joys and inward satisfactions which are perpetually springing up, and diffusing themselves among all the thoughts of good men. He is lodged in our very essence, and is as a soul within the soul, to irradiate its understanding, and enliven all the powers of man. How happy, therefore, is an intellectual being, who, by prayer and meditation, by virtue and good works, opens this communication between God and his own soul! Though the whole creation frowns upon him, and all nature looks black about him, he has his light and support within him, that are able to cheer his mind, and bear him up in the midst of all those horrors which encompass him. He ... knows that his helper is at hand, and is always nearer to him than any thing else can be, which is capable of annoying or terrifying him. In the midst of calumny or contempt, he attends to that Being who whispers better things within his soul, and whom he looks upon as his defender, his glory, and the lifter up of his head. In his deepest solitude and retirement, he knows that he is in company with the greatest of beings; and perceives within himself such real sensations of his presence, as are more delightful than any thing that can be met with in the conversation of his crea-Even in the hour of death. he considers the pains of his dissotution to be nothing else but the breaking down of that partition, which stands betwixt his soul and the sight of that Being who is always present with him, and is about to manifest itself to him in fulness of jov.

forts and refreshments which he conveys into our souls, and by those ravishing joys and inward satisfactions which are perpetually springing up, and diffusing themselves among all the thoughts of good men. He is lodged in our very essence, and is as a soul within the soul, to irradiate its understanding, rectify its will, purify its passions, our hearts always acceptable in his sight, that he may delight thus to reside and dwell in us. The light of nature could direct Seneca to this doctrine, in a very remarkable passage among his epistles: Sacer inest in nobis spiritus, bonorum malorumque custos et observator; et quemadmodum nos illum tractamus, ita et ille nos: "there is a holy spirit residing in us, who watches and observes both good and evil men, and will treat us after the same manner that we treat him." But I shall conclude this discourse with those more emphatical words in divine revelation. " If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Spectator.

On the Immortality of the Soul.

I was yesterday walking alone in one of my friend's woods, and lost myself in it very agreeably, as I was running over in my mind the several arguments that establish this great point, which is the basis of morality, and the source of all the pleasing hopes and secret joys that can arise in the heart of a reasonable creature. I considered those several proofs drawn,

First, from the nature of the soul itself, and particularly its immateriality; which, though not absolutely necessary to the eternity of its duration, has, I think, been evinced to almost a demonstration.

Secondly, from its passions and sentiments, as particularly from its love of existence, its horror of annihilation, and its hopes of immortality, with that secret satisfaction which it finds in the practice of virtue, and that uneasiness which follows in it upon the commission of vice.

Thirdly, from the nature of the Supreme Being, whose justice, goodness, wisdom, and veracity are all concerned in this point.

But among those and other excellent arguments for the immortality of the soul, there is one drawn from the perpetual progress of the soul to its perfection, without a possibility of ever arriving at it; which is a hint that I do not remember to have seen opened and improved by others who have written on this subject, though it seems to me to carry a very great weight with it. How can it enter into the thoughts of man, that the soul, which is capable of such immense perfections. and of receiving new improvements to all eternity, shall fall away into nothing almost as soon as it is cre-Are such abilities made for ated? no purpose? A brute arrives at a point of perfection that he can never pass: in a few years he has all the endowments he is capable of; and, were he to live ten thousand more, would be the same thing he is at present. Were a human soul thus at a stand in her accomplishments, were her faculties to be full blown, and incapable of farther enlargements, I could imagine it might fall away insensibly, and drop at once into a state of annihilation. But can we believe a thinking being that is in a perpetual progress of improvement, and travelling on from perfection to perfection, after having just looked abroad into the works of its Creator, and made a few discoveries of his infinite goodness, wisdom, and power, must perish at her first setting out, and in the very beginning of her inquiries?

A man, considered in his present state, seems only sent into the world to propagate his kind. It provides himself with a successor, and immediately quits his post to make room for him.

Heir crowds heir, as in a rolling flood

Wave urges wave.

Creech.

He does not seem born to enjoy life, but to deliver it down to others. This is not surprising to consider in animals, which are formed for our use, and can finish their business in a short life. The silkworm, after having spun her task, lays her eggs and dies. But a man can never have taken in his full measure of knowledge, has not time to subdue his passions, establish his soul in virtue, and come up to the perfection of his nature, before he is hurried off the stage. Would an infinitely wise Being make such glorious creatures for so mean a purpose? Can he delight in the production of such abortive intelligences, such shortlived reasonable beings? Would he give us talents that are not to be exerted? capacities that are never to be gratified? How can we find that wisdom that shines through all his works, in the formation of man, without looking on this world as only a nursery for the next, and believing that the several generations of rational creatures, which rise up and disappear in such quick successions, are only to receive the first rudiments of existence here, and afterwards to ly climate, where they may spread and flourish to all eternity?

There is not, in my opinion, a more pleasing and triumphant consideration in religion, than this of the perpetual progress which the soul makes towards the perfection of its nature, without ever arriving at a period in it. To look upon the soul as going on from strength to strength, to consider that she is to shine for ever with new accessions of glory, and brighten to all eternity; that she will be still adding virtue to virtue, and knowledge to knowledge; carries in it something wonderfully agreeable to that ambition which is natural to the mind of man. Nay, it must be a prospect pleasing to God himself to see his creatures for ever beautifying in his eyes, and drawing nearer to him, by greater degrees of resemblance.

Methinks this single consideration, of the progress of a finite spirit to perfection, will be sufficient to extinguish all envy in inferior natures, and all contempt in superior. That cherubim which now appears as a God to a human soul, knows very well that the period will come about in eternity, when the human soul shall be as perfect as he himself now is: nay, when she shall look down upon that degree of perfection as much as she now falls short of it. It is true, the higher nature still advances, and by that means preserves his distance and superiority in the scale of being; but he knows that, how high soever the station is of which he stands possessed at present, the inferior nature will at. length mount up to it, and shine forth in the same degree of glory.

existence here, and afterwards to With what astonishment and vebe transplanted into a more friend- neration may we look into our own souls, where there are such hidden stores of virtue and knowledge, such inexhausted sources of perfection! We know not yet what we shall be, nor will it ever enter into the heart of man to conceive the glory that will be always in reserve for him. The soul, considered with its Creator, is like one of those mathematical lines that may draw nearer to another for all cternity without a possibility of touching it: and can there be a thought so transporting as to consider ourselves in these perpetual approaches to him, who is not only the standard of perfection, but of happiness!

The Duty of Children to their Parents.

I am the happy father of a very towardly son, in whom I do not only see my life, but also my manner of life renewed. It would be extremely beneficial to society, if you would frequently resume subjects which serve to bind these sorts of relations faster, and endear the ties of blood with those of good-will, protection, observance, indulgence, and veneration. would, methinks, have this done after an uncommon method, and do not think any one who is not capable of writing a good play fit to undertake a work wherein there will necessarily occur so many secret instincts and biasses of human nature, which would pass unobserved by common eyes. thank Heaven I have no outrageous offence against my own excellent parents to answer for; but from my earliest infancy to this time, there are many faults which I committed that did not appear to me, even until I myself became a father. I had not until then a notion of the yearnings of heart which a man has when he sees his child do a laudable thing, or the sudden damp which seizes him when he fears he will act something unworthy. It is not to be imagined what a remorse touched me for a long train of childish negligences of my mother, when I saw my wife the other day look out of the window, and turn as pale as ashes upon seeing my younger boy sliding upon the ice. These slight intimations will give you to understand, that there are numberless little crimes which children take no notice of while they are doing. which, upon reflection, when they shall themselves become fathers, they will look upon with the utmost sorrow and contrition, that they did not regard before those whom they offended were to be no more seen. How many thousand things' do I remember, which would have highly pleased my father, and I omitted for no other reason, but that I thought what he proposed the effect of humour and old age, which I am now convinced had reason and good sense in it! I cannot now go into the parlour to him, and make his heart glad with an account of the matter which was of no consequence, but that I told it and acted in it. The good man and woman are long since in their graves, who used to sit and plot the welfare of us their children, while, perhaps, we were sometimes laughing at the old folks at the other end of the house. The truth of it is, were when I am now and then alone, we merely to follow nature in and look back upon my past life, these great duties of life, though we have a strong instinct towards ; the performing of them, we should be on both sides very deficient. Age is so unwelcome to the generality of mankind, and growth towards manhood so desirable to all, that resignation to decay is too difficult a task in the father; and deference, amidst the impulse of gay desires, appears unreasonable to the son. There are so few who can grow old with a good grace, and yet fewer who can come slow enough into the world, that a father, were he to be actuated by his desires, and a son, were he to consult himself only, could neither of them behave himself as he ought to the other. But when reason interposes against instinct, where it would carry either out of the interests of the other, there arises that happiest intercourse of good offices between those dearest relations of human life. The father, according to the opportunities which are offered to him, is throwing down blessings on the son, and the son endeavouring to appear the worthy offspring of such a father. It is after this manner that Camillus and his first-born dwell together. Camillus enjoys a pleasing and indolent old age, in which passion is subdued and reason ex-He waits the day of his alted. dissolution with a resignation mixed with delight, and the son fears the accession of his father's fortune with diffidence, lest he should not enjoy or become it as well as his predecessor. Add to this, that the father knows he leaves a friend to the children of his friends, an easy landlord to his tenants, and an agreeable companion to his acquaintance. He believes his son's behaviour will make him frequently remembered, but never wanted. VOL. I.

This commerce is so well cemented, that, without the pomp of saying, Son, be a friend to such a one when I am gone; Camillus knows, being in his favour is direction enough to the grateful youth who is to succeed him, without the admonition of his mentioning it. These gentlemen are honoured in all their neighbourhood, and the same effect which the court has on the manners of a kingdom, their characters have on all who live within the influence of them.

My son and I are not of fortune to communicate our good actions or intentions to so many as these gentlemen do; but I will be bold to say, my son has, by the applause and approbation which his behaviour towards me has gained him, occasioned that many an old man, besides myself, has rejoiced. Other men's children follow the example of mine, and I have the inexpressible happiness of overhearing our neighbours, as we ride by, point to their children and say, with a voice of joy, "There they go."

Spectator.

The Strength of Parental Affec-

I went the other day to visit Eliza, who, in the perfect bloom of beauty, is the mother of several children. She had a little prating girl upon her lap, who was begging to be very fine, that she might go abroad; and the indulgent mother, at her little daughter's request, had just taken the knots off her own head to adorn the hair of the pretty trifler. A smiling boy was at the same time caressing a lap-dog, which is their mother's favourite, because it pleases the children; and she, with a delight in her looks, which heightened her beauty, so divided her conversation with the two pretty prattlers, as to make them equally cheerful.

As I came in, she said with a blush, "Mr. Ironside, though you are an old batchelor, you must not laugh at my tenderness to my children." I need not tell my reader what civil things I said in answer to the lady, whose matron-like behaviour gave me infinite satisfaction: since I myself take great pleasure in playing with children, and am seldom unprovided of plums or marbles, to make my court to such entertaining companions.

Whence is it, said I to myself when I was alone, that the affection of parents is so intense to their offspring? Is it because they generally find such resemblances in what they have produced, as that thereby they think themselves renewed in their children, and are willing to transmit themselves to future times? or is it because they think themselves obliged by the dictates of humanity, to nourish and rear what is placed so immediately under their protection; and what by their means is brought into this world, the scene of misery, of necessity? These will not come up to it. Is it not rather the good providence of that Being, who in a supereminent degree protects and cherishes the whole race of mankind, his sons and creatures? How shall we, any other way, account for this natural affection, so signally displayed throughout every species of the animal creation, without which the course of nature would quickly fail, and every various kind be extinct? Instances of tenderness in the most savage brutes are so frequent, that quotations of that kind are altogether unnecessary.

If we, who have no particular concern in them, take a secret delight in observing the gentle dawn of reason in babes; if our ears are soothed with their half-forming and aiming at articulate sounds; if we are charmed with their pretty mimicry, and surprized at the unexpected starts of wit and cunning in these miniatures of man: what transport may we imagine in the breasts of those, into whom natural instinct hath poured tenderness and fondness for them! how amiable is such a weakness of human nature! or rather, how great a weakness is it to give humanity so reproachful a name! The bare consideration of paternal affection should methinks create a more grateful tenderness in children towards their parents than we generally see; and the silent whispers of nature be attended to, though the laws of God and man did not call aloud.

These silent whispers of nature have had a marvellous power, even when their cause hath been unknown. There are several examples in story of tender friendships formed betwixt men who knew not of their near relation: Such accounts confirm me in an opinion I have long entertained, that there is a sympathy betwixt souls, which cannot be explained by the prejudice of education, the sense of duty, or any other human motive.

The memoirs of a certain French nobleman, which now lie before mefurnish me with a very entertaing instance of this secret attraction, implanted by providence in the human soul. It will be necessary to inform the reader, that the person, whose story I am going to relate, was one whose roving and romantic temper, joined to a disposition singularly amorous, had led him through a vast variety of gallantries and amours. He had, in his youth, attended a princess of France into Poland, where he had been entertained by the king her husband, and married the daughter of a grandee. Upon her death he returned into his native country: where his intrigues and other misfortunes having consumed his paternal estate, he now went to take care of the fortune his deceased wife had left him in Poland. In his journey he was robbed before he reached Warsaw, and lay ill of a fever, when he met with the following adventure; which I shall relate in his own words.

" I had been in this condition for four days, when the countess of Venoski passed that way. She was informed that a stranger of good fashion lay sick, and her charity led her to see me. I remembered her, for I had often seen her with my wife, to whom she was nearly related; but when I found she knew me not, I thought fit to conceal my name. I told her I was a German; that I had been robbed; and that if she had the charity to send me to Warsaw, the queen would acknowledge it; I having the honour to be known to her majesty. The countess had the goodness to take compassion on me, and ordering me to be put in a litter, carried me to Warsaw, where I was loged in her house until my health should allow me to wait on the queen.

" My fever increased after my journey was over, and I was confined to my bed for fifteen days. When the countess first saw me, she had a young lady with her, about eighteen years of age, who was much taller and better shaped than the Polish women generally are. She was very fair, her skin exceedingly fine, and her air and shape inexpressibly beautiful. I was not so sick as to overlook this young beauty; and I felt in my heart such emotions at the first view, as made me fear that all my misfortunes had not armed me sufficiently against the charms of the fair sex.

"The amiable creature seemed afflicted at my sickness; and she appeared to have so much concern and care for me, as raised in me a great inclination and tenderness for her. She came every day into my chamber to inquire after my health; I asked who she was, and I was answered that she was niece to the countess of Venoski.

" I verily believe that the constant sight of this charming maid, and the pleasure I received from her careful attendance, contributed more to my recovery than all the medicines the physicians gave In short, my fever left me; and I had the satisfaction to see the lovely creature overjoyed at my recovery. She came to see me oftener as I grew better; and I already felt a stronger and more tender affection for her, than I ever bore to any woman in my life; when I began to perceive that her constant care of me was only a blind to give her an opportunity of seeing a young Pole, whom I took to be her lover. He seemed to be much about her age, of a brown complexion, very tall, but finely shaped. Every time she came to see me, the young gentleman came to find her out; and they usually retired to a corner of the chamber, where they seemed to converse with great earnestness. The aspect of the youth pleased me wonderfully; and if I had not suspected that he was my rival, I should have taken delight in his person and friendship.

"They both of them often asked me if I were in reality a German; which when I continued to affirm, they seemed very much froubled. One day I took notice that the young lady and gentleman, having retired to a window, were very intent upon a picture; and that every now and then they cast their eyes upon me, as if they had found some resemblance betwixt that and my features. I could not forbear to ask the meaning of it; upon which the lady answered that, if I had been a Frenchman, she should have imagined that I was the person for whom the picture was drawn, because it so exactly resembled me. I desired to see it. But how great was my surprise, when I found it to be the very painting, which I had sent to the queen five years before, and which she commanded me to get drawn to be given to my children! After I had viewed the piece, I cast my eyes upon the young lady, and then upon the gentleman I had thought to be her lover. My heart beat, and I felt a sècret emotion which filled me with wonder. I thought I traced in the two young persons some of my own features, and at that moment I said to myself: Are not these my children? The tears came into my eyes, and I was about to run and embrace them; but constraining myself with pain, I asked whose picture it was? The maid, perceiving that I could not speak without tears, fell a weeping. Her tears absolutely confirmed me in my opinion, and falling upon her neck, "Ah, my dear child," said I, " yes, I am your father." I could say no more. The youth seized my hands at the same time, and kissing, bathed them Throughout my life, with tears. I never felt a joy equal to this; and it must be owned, that nature inspires more lively motions and pleasing tenderness than the passions can possibly excite."

A Morning Pray for a young Student at School for for the common use of a School.

Father of all! we return thee most humble and hearty thanks for thy protection of us in the night season, and for the refreshment of our souls and bodies, in the sweet repose of sleep. Accept also our unfeigned gratitude for all thy mercies during the helpless age of infancy.

Continue, we beseech thee, to guard us under the shadow of thy wing. Our age is tender, and our nature frail, and without the influence of thy grace, we shall surely fall.

Let that influence descend into our hearts, and teach us to love thee and truth above all things. O guard our hearts from the temptations to deceit, and grant that we may abhor a lie as a sin and as a disgrace.

Inspire us also with an abhorrence of the loathsomeness of vice. and the pollutions of sensual pleasure. Grant at the same time, that we may early feel the deligh: of conscious purity, and wash our hands in innocency, from the united motives of inclination and of duty.

Give us, O thou Parent of all knowledge, a love of learning, and a taste for the pure and sublime pleasures of the understanding. Improve our memory, quicken our apprehension, and grant that we may lay up such a store of learning as may fit us for the station to which it shall please thee to call us, and enable us to make great advances in virtue and religion, and shine as lights in the world, by the influence of a good example.

Give us grace to be diligent in our studies, and that whatever we read, we may strongly mark, and inwardly digest it.

Bless our parents, guardians, and instructors; and grant that we may make them the best return in our power, for giving us opportunities of improvement, and for all their care and attention to our welfare.—They ask no return, but that we shall make use of those opportunities, and co-operate with their endeavours—O grant that we may never disappoint their anxious expectations.

Assist us mercifully, O Lord, that we may immediately engage in the studies and duties of the day, and go through them cheerfully, diligently, and successfully.

Accept our endeavours, and pardon our defects, through the merits of our blessed Saviour, Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

An Evening Prayer.

O Almighty God! again we approach thy mercy-seat, to offer unto thee our thanks and praises for the blessings and protection afforded us this day; and humbly to implore thy pardon for our manifold transgressions.

Grant that the words of various instruction which we have heard or read this day, may be so inwardly grafted in our hearts and memories, as to bring forth the fruits of learning and virtue.

Grant that as we recline on our pillows, we may call to mind the transactions of the day, condemn those things of which our conscience accuses us, and make and keep resolutions of amendment.

Grant that thy holy angels may watch over us this night, and guard us from temptation, excluding all improper thoughts, and filling our breasts with the purest sentiments of piety. Like as the hart panteth for the water brook, so let our souls thirst for thee, O Lord, and for whatever is excellent and beautiful in learning and beha i ur.

Correct, by the sweet influence of Christian charity, the irregularities of our temper, and restrain every tendency to ingratitude, and to ill-usage of our parents, teachers, pastors, and masters. Teach us to know the value of a good education, and to be thankful to those who labour in the improvement of our minds and morals. Give us grace to be reverent to our superiors, gentle to our equals or inferiors, and benevolent to all mankind. Elevate and enlarge our sentiments, and let all our conduct be regulated by right reason, by Christian charity, and attended with that peculiar generosity of mind which becomes a liberal scholar and a sincere Christian.

O Lord, bestow upon us whatever may be good for us, even though we should omit to pray for it; and avert whatever is hurtful, though in the blindness of our hearts we should wish for it.

Into thy hands then we resign ourselves, as we retire to rest, hoping by thy mercy to rise again with renewed spirits, to go through the business of the morrow, and to prepare ourselves for this life, and for a blessed immortality; which we ardently hope to attain, through the merits and intercession of thy Son our Saviour Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Continence of Scipio Afri- | able and lawful wedlock, and were canus.

THE soldiers, after the taking of New Carthage, brought before Scipio a young lady of such distinguished beauty, that she attracted the eyes of all wherever she went. Scipio, by inquiring concerning her country and parents, among other things learned, that she was betrothed to Allucius, prince of the Celtiberians. immediately ordered her parents and bridegroom to be sent for. In the mean time he was informed, that the young prince was so excessively enamoured of his bride, that he could not survive the loss of her. For this reason, as soon as he appeared, and before he spoke to her parents, he took great care to talk with him: " As you and I are both young," said he, "we can converse together with greater When your bride, who freedom. had fallen into the hands of my soldiers, was brought to me, I was informed that you loved her passionately; and in truth her perfect beauty left me no room to doubt of it. not solely engrossed by the affairs of my republic, I might have hoped to have been pardoned my excessive love for so charming a mistress. But as I am situated, and have it in my power, with pleasure I promote your happiness. Your future spouse has met with as civil and modest treatment from me, as if she had been amongst her own parents, who are soon to be yours too. I have kept her pure. in order to have it in my power to make you a present worthy of you and of me. The only return I ask of you for this favour is, that you will be a friend to the Roman people; and that if you believe me to be a man of worth, as the states of Spain formerly experienced my father and uncle to be, you may know there are many in Rome who resemble us; and that there are not a people in the universe, whom you ought less to desire to be an enemy, or more a friend to you or yours." The youth, covered with blushes, and full of joy, embraced Scipio's hands, praying the immortal gods to reward him, as he himself was not capable to do it in youthful passion, I mean in honour- the degree he himself desired, or he deserved. Then the parents and relations of the virgin were called. They had brought a great sum of money to ransom her. But seeing her restored to them without it, they began to beg Scipio to accept that sum as a present; protesting they would acknowledge it as a favour, as much as they did the restoring the virgin, without injury offered to her. Scipio, unable to resist their importunate solicitations, told them, he accepted it; and ordering it to be laid at his feet, thus addressed Allucius: " To the portion you are to receive from your father-in-law, I add this, and beg you would accept it as a nuptial present." So he desired him to take up the gold, and keep it for himself. Transported with joy at the presents and honours conferred on him, he returned home, and expatiated to his countrymen " There on the merits of Scipio. is come amongst us," says he, "a young hero like the gods, who conquers all things, as well by generosity and beneficence, as by arms." For this reason, having raised troops among his own subjects, he returned a few days after to Scipio with a body of 1400 horse.

Romulus to the People of Rome, after building the City.

If all the strength of cities lay in the height of their ramparts, or the depth of their ditches, we should have great reason to be in fear for that which we have now built. Hannibal to Scipio Africanus at their interview preceding the Battle of Zama.

Since fate has so ordained it, that I, who began the war, and who have been so often on the point of ending it by a complete conquest, should now come of my own motion to ask a peace; I am glad that it is of you, Scipio, I have the fortune to ask it. Nor will this be among the least of your glories, that Hannibal, victorious over so many Roman generals, submitted at last to you.

I could wish, that our fathers and we had confined our ambition within the limits which nature seems to have prescribed to it; the shores of Africa, and the The gods did shores of Italy. not give us that mind. On both sides we have been so eager after foreign possessions, as to put our own to the hazard of war. Rome and Carthage have had, each in her turn, the enemy at her gates. But since errors past may be more easily blamed than corrected, let it now be the work of you and me, to put an end, if possible, to the obstipate contention. For my own part, my years, and the experience I have had of the instability of fortune, inclines me to leave nothing to her determination which reason But much I fear, can decide. Here, in Africa, I am come to treat with a Roman for my own preservation and my country's. Such are the sports of fortune. Is she then to be trusted because she smiles? An advantageous peace is preferable to the hope of victory. The one is in your own power, the other at the pleasure of the gods. Should you prove victorious, it would add little to your own glory, or the glory of your country; if vanguished, you lose in one hour all the honour and reputation you have been so many years acquiring. But what is my aim in all this?that you should content yourself with our cession of Spain, Sicily, Sardinia, and all the islands between Italy and Africa. A peace on these conditions will, in my opinion, not only secure the future tranquillity of Carthage, but be sufficiently glorious for you, and for the Roman name. And do not tell me, that some of our citizens dealt fraudulently with you in the late treaty: it is I, Hannibal, that now ask a peace: I ask it, because I think it expedient for my country; and, thinking it expedient, I will inviolably maintain it.

Scituo's Answer.

Nobody is more sensible than I am of the weakness of man, and the power of fortune, and that whatever we enterprize is subject to a thousand chances. If, before the Romans passed into Africa, you had of your own accord quitted Italy, and made the offers you now make, I believe they would not have been rejected. But as you have been forced out of Italy, and we are masters here of the open country, the situation of things is much altered. And what is chiefly to be considered, the Carthaginians, by the late treaty which we entered into at their request, were, over and above what you offer, to have restored to us our prisoners without ransom, delivered up their ships of war, paid us five thousand talents, and to have given hostages for the performance of all. The senate accepted these conditions, but Carthage failed on her part; Carthage deceived us. What, then, is to be done? Are the Carthaginians to be released from the most important articles of the treaty as a reward of their breach of faith? No, certainly. If, to the conditions before agreed upon, you had added some new articles to our advantage, VOL. I.

there would have been matter of reference to the Roman people; but when, instead of adding, you retrench, there is no room for deliberation. The Carthaginians, therefore, must submit to us at discretion, or must vanquish us in battle.

The Character of Pompey.

Pompey had early acquired the surname of the Great, by that sort of merit, which, from the constitution of the republic, necessarily made him great; a fame and success in war superior to what Rome had ever known in the most celebrated of her generals. He had triumphed at three several times over the three different parts of the known world, Europe, Asia, Africa, and by his victories had almost doubled the extent, as well as the revenues of the Roman dominion; for, as he declared to the people on his return from the Mithridatic war, he had found the lesser Asia the boundary, but left it in the middle of their empire. He was about six years older than Cæsar; and while Cæsar, immersed in pleasures, oppressed with debts, and suspected by all honest men, was hardly able to show his head, Pompey was flourishing in the height of power and glory; and, by the consent of all parties, placed at the head of the republic. This was the post that his ambition seemed to aim at, to be the first man in Rome; the leader, not the tyrant of his country; for he more than once had it in his power to have made himself the master of it without any risk, if his virtue, or his phlegm at | he had not always the art to conleast, had not restrained him. But he lived in a perpetual expectation of receiving from the gift of the people what he did not care to seize by force; and, by fomenting the disorders of the city, hoped to drive them to the necessity of creating him dictator. It is an observation of all the historians, that, while Cæsar made no difference of power, whether it was conferred or usurped, whether over those who loved, or those who feared him, Pompey seemed to value. none but what was offered; nor to have any desire to govern, but with the good-will of the governed. What leisure he found from his wars he employed in the study of polite letters, and especially of eloquence, in which he would have acquired great fame, if his genius had not drawn him to the more dazzling glory of arms; yet he pleaded several causes with applause, in the defence of his friends and clients, and some of them in conjunction with Cicero. His language was copious and elevated, his sentiments just, his voice sweet, his action noble, and full of dignity. But his talents were better formed for arms than the gown: for, though in both he observed the same discipline, a perpetual modesty, temperance, and gravity of outward behaviour; yet, in the licence of camps, the example was more rare and striking. His person was extremely graceful, and imprinting respect; yet with an air of reserved haughtiness, which became the genoral better than the citizen. parts were plausible, rather than great; specious, rather than penetrating; and his views of politics but narrow; for his chief instrument of governing was dissimulation; yet ceal his real sentiments. As he was a better soldier than a statesman, so what he gained in the camp he usually lost in the city; and, though adored when abroad. was often affronted and mortified at home, till the imprudent opposition of the senate drove him to the alliance with Crassus and Czsar, which proved fatal both to himself and the republic. He took in these two, not as the partners, but the ministers rather of his power: that, by giving them some share with him, he might make his own authority uncontroulable. He had no reason to apprehend that they could ever prove his rivals; since neither of them had any credit or character of that kind, which alone could raise them above the laws: a superior fame, and experience in war, with the militia of the empire at their devotion. All this was purely his own; till, by cherishing Cæsar, and throwing into his hands the only thing which he wanted, arms and military command, he made him at last too strong for himself, and never began to fear him till it was too late. Cicero warmly dissuaded both his union and his breach with Cæsar; and after the rupture as warmly still. the thought of giving him battle. If any of these counsels had been followed, Pompey had preserved his life and honour, and the republic its liberty. But he was urged to his fate by a natural supersution and attention to those vain auguries with which he was flattered by all the haruspices: he had seen the same temper in Marius and Sylla, and observed the happy effects of it: but they assumed it only out of policy, he out of principle: they used it to animate their soldiers, when they had found I a probable opportunity of fighting; but he, against all prudence and probability, was encouraged by it to fight to his own ruin. He saw his mistakes at last, when it was out of his power to correct them; and, in his wretched flight from Pharsalia, was forced to confess that he had trusted too much to his hopes, and that Cicero had judged better and seen farther into things than he. The resolution of seeking refuge in Egypt finished the sad catastrophe of this great man: the father of the reigning prince had been highly obliged to him for his protection at Rome, and restoration to his kingdom; and the son had sent a considerable flect to his assistance in the present war: but in this ruin of his fortunes, what gratitude was there to be expected from a court governed by cunuchs and mercenary Greeks? all whose politics turned, not on the honour of the king, but the establishment of their own power, which was likely to be eclipsed by the admission of Pompey. How happy had it been for him to have died in that sickness, when all Italy was putting up vows and prayers for his safety! or if he had fallen by the chance of war on the plains of Pharsalia, in the defence of his country's liberty, he had died still glorious, though unfortunate; but, as if he had been reserved for an example of the instability of human greatness, he, who a few days before commanded kings and consuls, and all the noblest of Rome, was sentenced to die by a counsel of slaves; murdered by a base deserter; cast out naked and headless on the Egyptian strand; and when the whole earth, as Vellelius says, had scarce been sufficient for his victories, could not find a spot upon it at last for a grave. His body was burnt on the shore by one of his freed men, with the planks of an old fishing-boat; and his ashes, being conveyed to Rome, were deposited privately by his wife Cornelia, in a vault by his Al-The Egyptians, howban villa. ever, raised a monument to him on the place, and adorned it with figures of brass, which, being defaced afterwards by time, and buried almost in sand and rubbish, was sought out, and restored by . the emperor Hadrian.

The Character of Julius Casar.

Cæsar was endowed with every great and noble quality that could exalt human nature, and give a man the ascendant in society; formed to excel in peace, as well as war; provident in counsel; fearless in action; and executing what he had resolved with an amazing celerity; generous beyond measure to his friends; placable to his enemies; and for parts, learning, and eloquence, scarce inferior to any man. orations were admired for two qua-, lities, which are seldom found together, strength and elegance; Cicero ranks him among the greatest orators that Rome ever bred; and Quintilian says, that he spoke with the same force with which he fought; and, if he had devoted himself to the bar, would have been the only man capable of rivalling Cicero. Nor was he a master only of the politer arts; but conversant also with the most ing; and among other works which he published, addressed two books to Cicero, on the analogy of language, or the art of speaking and writing correctly. He was a most liberal patron of wit and learning, wheresoever they were found; and out of his love of those talents, would really pardon those who had employed them against himself; rightly judging, that by making such men his friends, he should draw praises from the same fountain, from which he had been aspersed. His capital passions were ambition, and love of pleasure; which he indulged in their turns to the greatest excess: yet the first was always predominant, to which he could easily sacrifice all the charms of the second, and draw pleasure even from toils and dangers, when they ministered to his glory. For he thought tyranny, as Cicero says, the greatest of goddesses; and had frequently in his mouth a verse of Euripides, which expressed the image of his soul, that if right and justice were ever to be violated, they were to be violated for the sake of reigning. This was the chiefend and purpose of his life: the scheme that he had formed from his early youth; so that as Cato truly declared of him, he came with sobriety and meditation to the subversion of the republic. He used to say, that there were two things necessary to acquire and to support power; soldiers and money; which vet depended mutually on each other; with money therefore he provided soldiers, and with soldiers extorted money, and was of all men, the most rapacious in plundering both friends and foes; sparabstruse and critical parts of learn! | were known to possess any share of treasure. His great abilities would necesarily have made him one of the first citizens of Rome; but disdaining the condition of a subject, he could never rest, till he had made himself a monarch. In acting this last part, his usual prudence seemed to fail him; as if the height to which he was mounted, had turned his head and made him giddy: for, by a vain ostentation of his power, he destroyed the stability of it: and as men shorten life by living too fast, so by an intemperance of reigning he brought his reign to a violent end.

Middleton.

The Character of Cato.

If we consider the character of Cato, without prejudice, he was certainly a great and worthy man; a friend to truth, virtue, liberty, yet falsely measuring all duty by the absurd rigour of the stoical rule; he was generally disappointed of the end which he sought by it, the happiness both of his private and public life. In his private conduct, he was severe, morose, inexorable; banishing all the softer affections, as natural enemies to justice, and as suggesting false motives of acting, from favour, clemency, and compassion: in public affairs he was the same; had but one rule of policy; to adhere to what was right; without regard to time or circumstances, or even to a force that could controul him: for instead of managing the power of the great, so as to mitigate the ill. or extract any good from it, he was urging it always to acts of violence by a perpetual defiance: so that. ing neither prince nor state, nor tem- with the best intentions in the world, ple, nor even private persons, who he often did great harm to the republic. This was his general behaviour: vet, from some particular facts, it appears that his strength of mind was not always impregnable, but had its weak places of pride, ambition, and party zeal; which when managed, and flattered to a certain point, would betray 'him sometimes into measures, contrary to his ordinary rule of right and The last act of his life was agreeable to his nature and philosophy: when he could no longer be what he had been; or when the ills of life over-balanced the good, which, by the principles of his sect, was a just cause for dying; he put an end to his life, with a spirit and resolution which would make one imagine, that he was glad to have found an occasion of dying in his proper character. On the whole, his life was rather admirable than amiable; fit to be praised, rather than imitated.

Brutus's Speech in Vindication of Casar's Murder.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! Hear me, for my cause; and be silent, that you may hear. Believe me, for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe. Censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses, that you may the better judge.

If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's; to him I say, that Brutus's love to Cæsar was no less than his. If, then, that friend demand .why Brutus rose against Cæsar? this is my answer. Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves; than that Cæsar were dead, to live all freemen ?-As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There are tears for his love, joy for his fortune, honour for his valour, and death for his ambition. Who's here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak: for him have I offended. Who's here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who's here so vile, that would not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended.—I pause for a reply.

None?—Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you should do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the capitol: his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony; who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth: as, which of you shall not? With this I depart—that as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself when it shall please my country to need my death.

A Comparison of Casar with Cato.

As to their extraction, years, and eloquence, they were pretty nigh equal. Both of them had the same greatness of mind, both the same degree of glory, but in different ways: Czsar was celebrated for his great bounty and generosity; Cato for his unsullied integrity: the former became renowned by his humanity and compassion; an austere severity heightened the dignity of Casar acquired glory the latter. by a liberal, compassionate, and forgiving temper; as did Cato, by never bestowing any thing. In the one, the miserable found a sanctuary; in the other, the guilty met with a certain destruction. Casar was admired for an easy, yielding temper: Cato for his immoveable firmness: Cæsar, in a word, had formed himself for a laborious active life : was intent upon promoting the interest of his friends, to the neglect of his own; and refused to grant nothing that was worth accepting; what he desired for himself was to have sovereign command, to be at the head of armies, and engaged in new wars, in order to display his military talents. As for Cato, his only study was moderation, regular conduct, and, above all, rigorous severity. He did not vie with the rich in riches, nor in faction with the factious; but taking a nobler aim, he contended in bravery with the brave; in modesty with the modest; in integrity with the upright; and was more desirous to be virtuous, than appear so; so that the dess he courted fame, the more it followed him.

Sallust, by Mr. Rose.

Caius Marius to the Romans, showing the Absurdity of their hesitating to confer on him the Rank of General merely on account of his Extraction.

It is but too common, my countrymen, to observe a material difference between the behaviour of those who stand candidates for places of power and trust, before and after their obtaining them. They solicit them in one manner, and execute them in another. They set out with a great appearance of activity, humility and moderation; and they quickly fall into sloth, pride, and avarice. It is, undoubtedly, no easy matter to discharge, to the general satisfaction, the duty of a supreme commander in troublesome times. I am, I hope, duly sensible of the importance of the office I propose to take upon me for the service of my country. To carry on, with effect, an expensive war, and yet be frugal of the public money; to oblige those to serve, whom it may be delicate to offend; to conduct, at the same time, a complicated variety of operations; to concert measures at home, answerable to the state of things abroad; and to gain every valuable end, in spite of opposition from the envious, the factious, and the disaffected—to do all this, my countrymen, is more difficult than is generally thought.

But, besides the disadvantages which are common to me with all others in eminent stations, my case is, in this respect, peculiarly hard; that, whereas a commander of patrician rank, if he is guilty of a neglect or breach of duty, has his great connexions, the antiquity of his family, the important services of his ancestors, and the multitudes he has by power engaged in his interest, to screen him from condign punishment, my whole safety depends upon myself; which renders it the more indispensably necessary for me to take care that my conduct be clear and unexceptionable. Besides, I am well aware, my countrymen, that the eye of the people is upon me; and that, though the impartial, who prefer the real advantage of the commonwealth to all other considerations, favour my pretensions, the patricians want nothing so much as an occasion against me. It is therefore my fixed resolution, to use my best endeavours, that you be not disappointed in me, and that their indirect designs against me may be defeated.

I have, from my youth, been familiar with toils and with dangers. I was faithful to your interest, my countrymen, when I served you for no reward, but that of honour. It is not my design to betray you, now that you have conferred upon me a place of profit. You have committed to my conduct the war against Jugurtha. The patricians are offended at this. But where would be the wisdom of giving such a command to one of their honourable body? a person of illustrious birth, of ancient family, of innumerable statues, but-of no experience! What service would his long line of dead ancestors, or his multitude of motionless statues, do his country in the day of battle? What could such a general do, but, in his trepidation and inexperience, have recourse to some inferior commander, for direction in difficulties, to which he was not himself equal? Thus, your patrician general would in fact have a general over him; so that the acting commander would still be a plebeian. So true is this, my countrymen, that I have, myself, known those who have been chosen consuls, begin then to read the history of their own country, of which, till that time, they were totally ignorant; that is, they first obtained the employment, and then bethought themselves of the qualification necessary for the proper discharge of it.

I submit to your judgment, Romans, on which side the advantage lies, when a comparison is made between patrician haughtiness and plebeian experience. The very actions which they have only read, I have partly seen and partly my-What they know self achieved. by reading, I know by action. They are pleased to slight my mean birth: I despise their mean characters. Want of birth and fortune is the objection against me; want of personal worth, against them. But are not all men of the same species? What can make a difference between one man and another, but the endowments of the mind? For my part, I shall always look upon the bravest man as the noblest man. Suppose it were enquired of the fathers of such patricians as Albinus and Bestia, whether, if they had their choice, they would desire sons of their character, or of mine; what would they answer, but that they should wish the worthiest to be their sons? If the patricians have reason to despise me, let them likewise despise their ancestors, whose nobility was the fruit of their virtue. Do they envy the honours bestowed upon me? Let them envy, likewise, my labours, my abstinence, and the dangers I have undergone for my country, by which I have acquired them. But those worthless men lead such a life of inactivity, as if they despised any honours you can bestow, whilst they aspire to honours, as if they had deserved them by the most industrious virtue. They lay claim to the rewards of inactivity, for their having enjoyed the pleasures of luxury: yet none can be more lavish than they are, in praise of their ancestors. And they imagine they honour themselves, by celebrating their forefathers: whereas they do the very contrary; for as much as their ancestors were distinguished for their virtues, so much are they disgraced by their vices. The glory of ancestors casts a light indeed upon their posterity; but it only serves to show what the descendants are. It alike exhibits to public view their degeneracy and their worth. I own, I cannot boast of the deeds of my forefathers; but I hope I may answer the cavils of the patricians, by standing up in the defence of what I have myself done.

Observe, now, my countrymen, the injustice of the patricians .-They arrogate to themselves honours, on account of the exploits done by their forefathers; whilst they will not allow me the due praise, for performing the very same sort of actions in my own person. He has no statues, they cry, of his family. He can trace no venerable line of ancestors.—What then? Is it matter of more praise to disgrace one's illustrious ancestors, than to become illustrious by one's own good behaviour? What if I can show no statues of my family? I can show the standards, the armour, and the trappings, which I have myself taken from the vanquished: I can show the scars of these wounds, which I have received by facing the enemies of my These are my statues. country. These are the honours I boast of. Not left me by inheritance, as theirs, but earned by toil, by abstinence, by valour; amidst clouds of dust, and seas of blood: scenes of action, where those effeminate patricians, who endeavour by indirect means to depreciate me in your esteem, have never dared to show their fa-

The Character of Catiline.

Lucius Catiline was descended of an illustrious family; he was a man of great vigour both of body and mind, but of a disposition extremely profligate and depraved. From his youth he took pleasure in civil wars, massacres, depredations, and intestine broils; and in these, he employed his younger days. His body was formed for enduring coldhunger, and want of rest, to a degree indeed incredible: his spirit was daring, subtle, and changeable: he was expert in all the arts of simulation and dissimulation; covetous of what belonged to others. lavish of his own; violent in his passions; he had eloquence enough. but a small share of wisdom. His boundless soul was constantly engaged in extravagant and romantic projects too high to be attempted. After Sylla's usurpation, he was fired with a violent desire of seizing the government; and, provided he could but carry his point, he was not at all solicitous by what means. His spirit, naturally violent, was daily more and more hurried on to the execution of his design, by his poverty, and the consciousness of his crimes; both which evils he had heightened by the practices above mentioned. He was encouraged to it by the wickedness of the state, and avarice; vices equally fatal, though of contrary natures.

Hannibal being sent to Spain, on his arrival there, attracted the eyes of the whole army. The veterans believed Hamilcar was revived and restored to them: they saw the same vigorous countenance, the same piercing eye, the same complexion and features. But in a short time his behaviour occasioned this resemblance of his father to contribute the least towards his gaining their favour. And, in truth, never was there a genius more happily formed for two things, most manifestly contrary to each other, to obey and to command. This made it difficult to determine, whether the general or soldiers loved him most.-Where any enterprize required vigour and valour in the performance, Asdrubal always chose him to command at the executing it: nor were the troops ever more confident of success, or more intrepid, than when he was at their head. None ever showed greater bravery in undertaking hazardous attempts, or more presence of mind and conduct in the execution of them. No hardship could fatigue his body, or daunt his courage: he could equally bear cold and heat. The necessary refection of nature, not the pleasure of his palate, he solely regarded in his meals. He had no distinction of day and night in his watching, or taking rest; and appropriated no time to sleep, but what remained after he had completed his duty: he never sought for a soft, or a retired place of repose; but was often seen lying on the bare ground, wrapt in a soldier's cloak, amongst the centinels and guards. He did not distinguish himself from his companions by the magnificence of his dress, but by the quality of his horse and arms. At the same time, he was by fur the best foot and horse soldier in the nerous Lucretia, could not survive VOL. I.

army; ever the foremost in a charge, and the last who left the field after the battle was begun. These shining qualities were however balanced by great vices; inhuman cruelty, more than Carthaginian treachery; no respect for truth or honour, no fear of the gods, no regard for the sanctity of oaths, no sense of religion. With a disposition thus chequered with virtues and vices, he served three years under Asdrubal, without neglecting to pry into, or perform any thing, that could contribute to make him hereafter a complete general. Livy.

Junius Brutus over the dead body of Lucretia, who had stabbed herself in consequence of the rape of Tarquin.

Yes, noble lady, I swear by this blood which was once so pure, and which nothing but royal villany could have polluted, that I will pursue Lucius Tarquinus the Proud, his wicked wife, and their children, with fire and sword: nor will I suffer any of that family, or any other whatsoever, to be king of Rome.—Ye gods, I call you to witness this my oath.

There, Romans, turn your eyes to that sad spectacle !-- the daughter of Lucretius, Collatinus's wifeshe died by her own hand! See there a noble lady, whom the lust of a Tarquin reduced to the necessity of being her own executioner, to attest her innocence. Hospitably entertained by her as a kinsman of her husband, Sextus, the perfidious guest, became her brutal ravisher. The chaste, the ge-3 Z the insult. Glorious woman! but once only treated as a slave, she thought life no longer to be endured. Lucretia, a woman, disdained a life that depended on a tyrant's will; and shall we, shall men, with such an example before our eyes, and after five-and-twenty years of ignominious servitude, shall we, through a fear of dying, defer one single instant to assert our liberty? No, Romans; now is , the time; the favourable moment we have so long waited for is come. Tarquin is not at Rome; the patricians are at the head of the enterprize; the city is abundantly provided with men, arms, and all things necessary. There is nothing wanting to secure the success, if our own courage does not fail us. And shall those warriors, who have ever been so brave when foreign enemies were to be subdued, or when conquests were to be made to gratify the ambition and avarice of Tarquin, be then only cowards, when they are to deliver themselves from slavery?

Some of you are perhaps intimidated by the army which Tarquin now commands: the soldiers, you imagine, will take the part of their general. Banish such a groundless fear: the love of liberty is natural to all men. Your fellow-citizens in the camp feel the weight of oppression, with as quick a sense as you that are in Rome; they will as eagerly seize the occasion of throwing off the yoke. But let us grant there may be some among them who, through baseness of spirit, or a bad education, will be disposed to favour the tyrant; the number of these can be but small, and we have means sufficient in our hands to reduce them to reason. They have left us hostages more dear to them than life; their wives, their children, their fathers, their mothers, are here in the city. Courage, Romans, the gods are for us; those gods, whose temples and altars the impious Tarquin has profaned by sacrifices and libations made with polluted hands, polluted with blood, and with numberless unexpiated crimes committed against his subjects.

Ye gods, who protected our forefathers! ye genii, who watch for the preservation and glory of Rome! do you inspire us with courage and unanimity in this glorious cause, and we will to our last breath defend your worship from all profanation. Livy.

The Character of Mary Queen of Scots.

To all the charms of beauty, and the utmost elegance of external form, Mary added those accomplishments which render their impression irresistible. Polite, affable, insinuating, sprightly, and capable of speaking and of writing with equal case and dignity. Sudden, however, and violent in all her attachments; because her heart was warm and unsuspicious. Impatient of contradiction, because she had been accustomed from her infancy to be treated like a queen. No stranger, on some occasions, to dissimulation; which in that perfidious court where she received her education, was reckoned among the necessary arts of government. Not insensible to flattery, or unconscious of that pleasure, with which almost every weman beholds the influence of her own beauty. Formed with the qualities that we love, not with the talents that we admire; she was an agreeable woman rather than an illustrious queen. The vivacity of her spirit, not sufficiently tempered with sound judgment, and the warmth of her heart, which was not all times under the restraint of discretion, betrayed her both into errors and into crimes. To say that she was always unfortunate, will not account for that long and almost uninterrupted succession of calamities which befel her; we must likewise add, that she was often imprudent. Her passion for Darnly was rash, youthful, and excessive. And though the sudden transition to the opposite extreme, was the natural effect of her ill-requited love, and of his ingratitude, insolence, and brutality; yet neither these, nor Bothwell's artful address and important services, can justify her attachments to that nobleman. Even the manners of the age, licentious as they were, are no apology for this unhappy passion; nor can they induce us to look on that tragical and infamous scene which followed upon it with less abhorrence. Humanity will draw a veil over this part of her character which it cannot approve, and may, perhaps, prompt some to impute her actions to her situation, more than to her dispositions; and to lament the unhappiness of the former, rather than accuse the perverseness of the latter. Mary's sufferings exceed, both in degree and in duration, those tragical distresses which fancy has feigned to excite sorrow and commiseration; and while we survey them, we are apt altogether to forget her frailties, we think of her faults with less indignation, and approve of our tears, as if they were shed for a person who had attained much nearer to pure virtue.

With regard to the queen's person, a circumstance not to be omitted in writing the history of a female reign, all contemporary authors agree in ascribing to Mary, the utmost beauty of countenance, and elegance of shape, of which the human form is capable. Her hair was black, though, according to the fashion of that age, she frequently wore borrowed locks, and of different colours. Her eyes were a dark grey, her complexion was exquisitely fine, and her hands and arms remarkably delicate both as to shape and colour. Her stature was of a height that rose to the majestic. She danced, she walked, and rode with equal grace. Her taste for music was just, and she both sung and played upon the lute with uncommon skill.-Towards the end of her life she began to grow fat; and her long confinement, and the coldness of the houses in which she was imprisoned, brought on a rheumatism which deprived her of the use of her limbs. No man, says Brantome, ever beheld her person without admiration and love, or will read her history without sorrow.

Robertson.

Speech of Adherbal to the Roman Senute, imploring their assistance against Jugurtha.

Fathers!

It is known to you that king Micipsa, my father, on his deathbed, left in charge to Jugurtha. his adopted son, conjunctly with my unfortunate brother Hiempsal and myself, the children of his own body, the administration of the kingdom of Numidia, directing us to consider the senate and people of Rome as proprietors of it. He charged us to use our best endeavours to be serviceable to the Roman commonwealth, in peace and war; assuring us, that your protection would prove to us a defence against all enemies, and would be instead of armies, fortifications, and treasures.

While my brother and I were thinking of nothing but how to regulate ourselves according to the directions of our deceased father, Jugurtha—the most infamous of mankind! breaking through all ties of gratitude and of common humanity, and trampling on the authority of the Roman commonwealth—procured the murder of my unfortunate brother, and has driven me from my throne and native country, though he knows I inherit from my grandfather Massimissa, and my father Micipsa, the friendship and alliance of the Ro-

For a prince to be reduced, by villany, to my distressful circumstances, is calamity enough; but my misfortunes are heightened by the consideration, that I find myself obliged to solicit your assistance, fathers, for the services done you by my ancestors, not for any I have been able to render you in my own person. Jugurtha has put it out of my power to deserve any thing at your hands, and has forced me to be burthensome before I could be useful to you. And yet, if I had no plea but my undeserved misery, who, from a powerful prince, the descendant of a race of illustrious monarchs, find myself, without any fault of my own, destitute of every support, and reduced to the necessity of begging foreign assistance against an enemy who has seized my throne and kingdom; if my unequalled distresses were all I had to plead, it would become the greatness of the Roman commonwealth, the arbitress of the world, to protect the injured, and to check the triumph of daring wickedness over helpless innocence. But, to provoke your vengeance to the utmost, Jugurtha has driven me from the very dominons which the senate and people of Rome gave to my ancestors, and from which my grandfather and my father, under your umbrage, expelled Syphax and the Carthaginians. Thus, fathers, your kindness to our family is dcfeated, and Jugurtha, in injuring me, throws contempt on you.

O wretched prince! O cruel reverse of fortune! O father Micipsa! is this the consequence of your generosity, that he whom your goodness raised to an equality with your own children, should be the murderer of your children? Must then the royal house of Numidia always be a scene of havock and blood? While Carthage remained, we suffered, as was to be expected, all sorts of hardships from their Lostile attacks; our enemy near; our only powerful ally, the Roman commonwealth, at a distance; while we were so circumstanced we were always in arms, and in action. When that scourge of Africa was no morewe congratulated ourselves on the prospect of established peace. But instead of peace, behold the kingdom of Numidia drenched with royal blood, and the only surviving son of its late king flying from an adopted murderer, and seeking that safety in foreign parts, which he cannot command in his own kingdom.

Whither—O whither shall I fly? If I return to the royal palace of my ancestors, my father's throne is seized by the murderer of my brother. What can I there expect, but that Jugurtha should hasten to imbrue in my blood those hands which are now reeking with my brother's? If I were to fly for refuge or for assistance to any other court, from what prince can I hope protection if the Roman commonwealth gives me up? from my own family or friends I have no expectations. My royal father is no more: he is beyond the reach of violence, and out of hearing of the complaints of his unhappy son. Were my brother alive, our mutual sympathy would be some alleviation; but he is hurried out of life in his early youth, by the very hand which should have been the last to injure any of the royal family of Numidia. The bloody Jugurtha has butchered all whom he suspected to be in my interest. Some have been destroyed by the lingering torment of the cross; others have been given a prey to wild beasts, and their anguish made the sport of men more cruel than wild beasts. If there be any yet alive, they are shut up in dungeons, there to drag out a life more intolerable than death itself.

Look down, illustrious senators of Rome! from that height of powers to which you are raised, on the unexampled distress of a prince, who is, by the cruelty of a wicked intruder, become an outcast from all mankind. Let not the crafty insinuations of him who returns murder for adoption prejudice your judgment. Do not listen to the wretch who has butchered the son and relations of a king, who gave him power to sit on the same throne with his own sons.-I have been informed that he labours by his emissaries to prevent your determining any thing against him in his absence, pretending that I magnify my distress, and might for him have staid in peace in my own kingdom. But, if ever the time comes when the due vengeance from above shall overtake him, he will then dissemble as I Then he, who now, hardened in wickedness, triumphs over those whom his violence has laid low, will in his turn feel distress. and suffer for his impious ingratitude to my father, and his bloodthirsty cruelty to my brother.

O murdered, butchered brother! O dearest to my heart-now gone for ever from my sight !- But why should I lament his death? He is indeed deprived of the blessed light of heaven, of life, and kingdom at once, by the very person who ought to have been the first to hazard his own life in defence of any one of Micipsa's family; but as things are, my brother is not so much deprived of these comforts, as delivered from terror, from flight, from exile, and the endless train of miseries which render life to me a burden. He lies full low, gored with wounds. and festering in his own blood: but he lies in peace; he feels none of the miseries which rend my soul with agony and distraction, whilst I am set up a spectacle to all mankind of the uncertainty of human affairs. So far from having it in my power to revenge his death, I am not master of the means of securing a condition to defend my kingdom | from the violence of the usurper, I am obliged to apply for foreign protection for my own person.

Fathers! senators of Rome! the arbiters of the world !---to you I fly for refuge from the murderous fury of Jugurtha .- By your affection for your children, by your love for your country, by your own virtues. by the majesty of the Roman commonwealth, by all that is sacred, and all that is dear to you-deliver a wretched prince from undeserved, unprovoked injury; and save the kingdom of Numidia, which is your own property, from being the prey of violence, usurpation, and cruelty.

Sallust.

The Character of William the Conqueror.

The character of this prince has seldom been set in its true light; some eminent writers have been dazzled so much by the more shining parts of it, that they have hardly seen his faults; whilst others, out of a strong detestation of tyranny, have been unwilling to allow him the praise he deserves.

He may with justice be ranked among the greatest generals any age has produced. There was united in him activity, vigilance, intrepidity, caution, great force of judgment, and never-failing presence of mind. He was strict in his discipline, and kept his soldiers in perfect obedience; yet preserved their affection. Having been from his very childhood continually in war, and at the head of armies, he joined to all the capacity that genius could that experience could teach, and was a perfect master of the military art, as it was practised in the times wherein he lived. His constitution enabled him to endure any hardships, and very few were equal to him in personal strength, which was an excellence of more importance than it is now, from the manner of fighting then in use. It is said of him, that none except himself could bend his bow. His courage was heroic, and he possessed it not only in the field, but (which is more uncommon) in the cabinet. attempting great things with means that to other men appeared totally unequal to such undertakings, and steadily prosecuting what he had boldly resolved, being never disturbed or disheartened by difficulties, in the course of his enterprizes; but having that noble vigour of mind, which, instead of bending to opposition, rises against it, and seems to have a power of controuling and commanding fortune herself.

Nor was he less superior to pleasure than to fear: no luxury softened him, no riot disordered, no sloth relaxed. It helped not a little to maintain the high respect his subjects had for him, that the majesty of his character was never let down by any incontinence or indecent excess. His temperance and his chastity were constant guards, that secured his mind from all weakness, supported its dignity, and kept it always as it were on the throne.-Through his whole life he had no partner of his bed but his queen: a most extraordinary virtue in one who had lived, even from his earliest youth, amidst all the license of camps, the allurements of a court, and the seductions of sovereign powgive, all the knowledge and skill er! Had he kept his oaths to his people as well as he did his marriage vow, he would have been the best of kings: but he indulged other passions of a worse nature, and infinitely more detrimental to the public than those he restrained. A lust of power, which no regard to justice could limit, the most unrelenting cruelty, and the most insatiable avarice possessed his soul.-It is true, indeed, that among many acts of extreme inhumanity, some shining instances of great clemency may be produced, that were either effects of his policy, which taught him this method of acquiring friends, or of his magnanimity, which made him slight a weak and subdued enemy, such as was Edgar Atheling, in whom he found neither spirit nor talents able to contend with him for the crown. But where he had no advantage nor pride in forgiving, his nature discovered itself to be utterly void of all sense of compassion; and some barbarities which he committed exceeded the bounds that even tyrants and conquerors prescribe to them-

Most of our ancient historians give him the character of a very religious prince; but his religion was after the fashion of those times, belief without examination, and devotion without piety. It was a religion that prompted him to endow monasteries, and at the same time allowed him to pillage kingdoms; that threw him on his knees before a relic or cross, but suffered him unrestrained to trample upon the liberties and rights of mankind.

As to his wisdom in government, of which some modern writers have spoken very highly, he was indeed so far wise that, through a long unquiet reign, he knew how to support oppression by terror, and emerging the sextortions. Though the greatness of the ancient landed estate of the crown, and the feudal profits to which he legally was entitled, rendered him one of the richest monarchs in Europe; he was ployed the properest means for the carrying on a very iniquitous and violent administration. But that which alone deserves the name of wisdom in the character of a king, the maintaining of authority by the exercise of those virtues which make the happiness of his people, was what, with all his abilities, he does not appear to have possessed. Nor did he excel in those soothing and popular arts, which sometimes change the complexion of a tyranny, and give it a fallacious appearance of freedom. His government was harsh and despotic, violating even the principles of that constitution which he himself had established. Yet so far he performed the duty of a sovereign, that he took care to maintain a good police in his realm; curbing licentiousness with a strong hand, which, in the tumultuous state of his government. was a great and difficult work .--How well he performed it we may learn even from the testimony of a contemporary Saxon historian, who says, that during his reign, a man might have travelled in perfect security all over the kingdom with his bosom full of gold, nor durst any kill another in revenge of the greatest offences, nor offer violence to the chastity of a woman. But it was a poor compensation, that the highways were safe, when the courts of justice were dens of thieves, and when almost every man in authority, or in office, used his power to oppress and pillage the people.-The king himself did not only tolerate, but encourage, support, and even share these extortions. Though the greatness of the ancient landed estate of the crown, and the feudal profits to which he legally was entitled, rendered him one of the rich-not content with all that opulence, but by authorizing the sheriffs, who collected his revenues in the several counties, to practise the most grievous vexations and abuses, for the raising of them higher, by a perpetual auction of the crown lands, so that none of his tenants could be secure of possession, if any other would come and offer more; by various iniquities in the court of exchequer, which was entirely Norman; by forfeitures wrongfully taken; and lastly, by arbitrary and illegal taxations, he drew into his treasury much too great a proportion of the wealth of his kingdom.

It must however be owned, that if his avarice was insatiably and unjustly rapacious, it was not meanly parsimonious, nor of that sordid kind which brings on a prince dishonour and contempt. He supported the dignity of his crown with a decent magnificence, and though he never was lavish, he sometimes was liberal, more especially to his soldiers and to the church. But looking on money as a necessary means of maintaining and increasing power, he desired to accumulate as much as he could, rather. perhaps, from an ambitious than a covetous nature; at least his avarice was subservient to his ambition, and he laid up wealth in his coffers, as he did arms in his magazines, to be drawn out when any proper occasion required it, for the defence and enlargement of his dominions.

Upon the whole he had many great qualities, but few virtues; and if those actions that most particularly distinguish the man or the king are impartially considered, we shall find that in his character there is much to admire, but still more to abhor.

Lyttelton.

The Character of Queen Elizabeth.

There are few personages in history who have been more exposed to the calumny of enemies, and the adulation of friends, than queen Elizabeth, and yet there scarce is any whose reputation has been more certainly determined by the unanimous consent of posterity. The unusual length of her administration, and the strong features of 'her character, were able to overcome all prejudices; and obliging her detractors to abate much of their invectives, and her admirers somewhat of their panegyrics, have at last, in spite of political factions, and what is more, of religious animosities, produced a uniform judgment with regard to her conduct. Her vigour, her constancy, her magnanimity, her penetration, vigilance, and address, are allowed to merit the highest praises, and appear not to have been surpassed by any person who ever filled a throne: a conduct less rigorous, less imperious, more sincere, more indulgent to her people, would have been requisite to form a perfect character. By the force of her mind, she controlled all her more active and stronger qualities, and prevented them from running into excess: her heroism was exempt from all temerity, her frugality from avarice, her friendship from partiality, her enterprize from turbulency, and a vain ambition. She guarded not herself with equal care or equal success from lesser infirmities; the rivalship of beauty, the desire of admiration, the jealousy of love, and the sallies of anger.

Her singular talents for government were founded equally on her temper and on her capacity. Endowed with a great command over herself, she soon obtained an uncontrolled ascendant over the people; and while she merited all their esteem by her real virtues, she also engaged their affections by her pretended ones. Few sovereigns of England succeeded to the throne in more difficult circumstances; and none ever conducted the government with such uniform success and felicity. Though unacquainted with the practice of toleration, the true secret for managing religious factions, she preserved her people, by her superior prudence, from those confusions in which theological controversy had involvcd all the neighbouring nations; and, though her enemies were the most powerful princes of Europe, the most active, the most enterprizing, the least scrupulous, she was able by her vigour to make deep impressions on their state; her own greatness meanwhile remained untouched and unimpaired.

The wise ministers and brave warriors, who flourished during her reign, share the praise of her success; but, instead of lessening the applause due to her, they make great addition to it: they owed, all of them, their advancement to her choice; they were supported by her constancy; and, with all their ability, they were never able to acquire any undue ascendant over her. In her family, in her court, in her kingdom, she remained equally mistress. The force of the tender passions was great over her, but the force of her mind was still superior; and the combat which her victory visibly cost her serves only to display the firmness of her resolution, and the loftiness of her ambitious sentiments.

The fame of this princess, though it has surmounted the prejudices both of faction and of bigotry, yet lies sull exposed to another prejudice, which is more durable because more natural, and which, according to the different views in which we survey her, is capable cither of exalting beyond measure, or diminishing the lustre of her This prejudice is character. founded on the consideration of heresex. When we contemplate heres a woman, we are apt to be struck with the highest admiration of her qualities and extensive capacity; but we are also apt to require some more softness of disposition, some greater lenity of temper, some of those amiable weaknesses by which her sex is distinguished. But the true method of estimating her merit is to lay aside all these considerations, and to consider her merely as a rational being, placed in authority, and entrusted with the government of mankind. We may find it difficult to reconcile our fancy to her as a wife or a mistress; but her qualities as a sovereign, though with some considerable exceptions, are the object of undisputed applause and approbation.

Speech of Demosthenes to the Athenians, exciting them to prosecute the War against Philip with Vigour.

Athenians!

Had this assembly been called together on an unusual occasion, I should have waited to hear the opinions of others before I had offered my own; and if what they proposed had seemed to me judicious, I should have been silent; if otherwise, I should have given my reasons for differing from those who had spoken before me. But as the subject of our present deliberations has been often treated by others, I hope I shall be excused, though I rise up first to offer my opinion. Had the schemes formerly proposed been successful, there had been no occasion for the present consultation.

First, then, my countrymen, et me intreat you not to look upon the state of our affairs as desperate, though it be unpromising: for, as on one hand, to compare the present with times past, matters have indeed a very gloomy aspect; so, on the other, if we extend our views to future times, I have good hopes that the distresses we are now under will prove of greater advantage to us than if we had never fallen into them. If it be asked, what probability there is of this, I answer, I hope it will appear that it is our egregious misbehaviour alone that has brought us into these disadvantageous circumstances; from which follows the necessity of altering our conduct, and the prospect of bettering our circumstances by doing so.

If we had nothing to accuse ourselves of, and yet found our affairs in their present disorderly condition, we should not have room left even for the hope of recovering ourselves. But, my countrymen, it is known to you, partly by your own remembrance, and partly by information from others, how gloriously the Lacedæmonian war was sustained, in which we engaged in defence of our own rights, against an enemy powerful and formidable; in the whole conduct of which war nothing happened unworthy

the dignity of the Athenian state; and this within these few years past. My intention in recalling to your memory this part of our history is, to show you that you have no reason to fear any enemy, if your operations be wisely planned, and vigorously executed.

The enemy has indeed gained considerable advantages by treaty as well as by conquest; for it is to be expected, that princes and states will court the alliance of those who seem powerful enough to protect both themselves and their confederates. But, my countrymen, though you have of late been too supinely negligent of what concerned you so nearly, if you will even now resolve to exert yourselves unanimously, each according to his respective abilities and circumstances, the rich by contributing liberally towards the expence of the war, and the rest by presenting themselves to be enrolled to make up the deficiencies of the army and navy; if, in short, you will at last resume your own character and act like yourselves, it is not yet too late, with the help of Heaven, to récover what you have lost, and to inflict the just vengeance on your insolent ene-

But when will you, my countrymen, when will you rouze from your indolence, and bethink yourselves of what is to be done?—When you are forced to it by some fatal disaster? when irresistible necessity drives you? What think you of the disgraces which are already come upon you? is not the past sufficient to stimulate your activity? or do ye wait for something yet to come, more forcible and urgent? How long will you amuse yourselves with enquiring of one another after news as you ramble idly about the streets? what news so strange ever came to Athens, as that a Macedonian should subdue this state, and lord it over Greece? Again, you ask one another, " What! is Philip dead?" "No," it is answered; "but he is very ill." How foolish this curiosity! What is it to you whether Philip is sick or well? suppose he were dead, your inactivity would soon raise up against yourselves another Philip in his stead; for it is not his strength that has made him what he is, but your indolence, which has of late been such that you seem neither in a condition to take any advantage, of the enemy, nor to keep it if it were gained by others for you.

Wisdom directs, that the conductors of a war always anticipate the operations of the enemy, instead of waiting to see what steps he shall take: whereas you, Athenians, though you be masters of all that is necessary for war, as shipping, cavalry, infantry, and funds, have not the spirit to make the proper use of your advantages, but suffer the enemy to dictate to you every motion you are to make. If you hear that Philip is in the Chersonesus, you order troops to be sent thither; if at Pylæ, forces are to be detached to secure that post. Wherever he makes an attack, there you stand upon your defence; you attend him in all his motions, as soldiers do their general; but you never think of striking out of yourselves any bold and effectual scheme for bringing him to reason, by being beforehand with him. A pitiful manner of carrying on war at any time; but, in the critical circumstances you are now in, utterly ruinous.

O shame to the Athenian name! We undertook this war against Philip in order to obtain redress of grievances, and to force him to indemnify us for the injuries he had done us; and we have conducted it so successfully, that we shall by and by think ourselves happy if we escape being defeated and ruined. For, who can think that a prince of his restless and ambitious temper will not improve the opportunities and advantages which our indolence and timidity present him? will he give over his designs against us, without being obliged to it? and who will oblige him? who will restrain his fury? shall we wait for assistance from some unknown country? In the name of all that is sacred and all that is dear to us, let us make an attempt with what forces we can raise, if we should not be able to raise as many as we would wish: let us do somewhat to curb this insolent tyrant of his pursuits. Let us not trifle away the time in hearing the ineffectual wranglings of orators, while the enemy is strengthening himself and we are declining, and our allies growing more and more cold to our interest, and more apprehensive of the consequences of continuing on our side. The Character of Francis I, with some Reflections on his Rivalship with Charles V.

Francis died at Rambouillet, on the last day of March, in the fiftythird year of his age, and the thirty-third year of his reign. During twenty-eight years of that time, an avowed rivalship subsisted between him and the emperor, which invol-
